The consumer demand is for quality egg and poultry products, and the sales value of our under grades are so low that we feel as operators something must be done to improve the general quality of eggs and poultry in the province.

The approximate spread between grade A and grade B eggs being 20 to 25c per dozen is showing too great a loss to our producers and as operators, we felt it our duty to launch a campaign to better the quality of eggs particularly.

BENEATH THE 12 MILE REEF CINEMASCOPE ATTRACTION CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

A most wonderful coupling of screen story and screen process has been effected in the thrilling Technicolor spectacle, 'Beneath the 12-Mile Reef,' at the Capitol Theatre.

The film stars Robert Wagner, Terry Moore and Gilbert Roland in a dramatic suspenseful theme about Florida sponge fishermen. However, the real star of the film is Twentieth Century-Fox's new process, Cinemascope, and it is given its best opportunity to date to display its superiority as a film medium.

Porter Company, while employed at the Marine Wharf in Summerside, were entitled to receive punitive overtime.

Mr. Pettigrove said last evening his findings "will be based on the prevailing practice in the locality in the construction industry."

Mr. Pettigrove in an interview stated that all Federal contracts contain a clause limiting hours of work to 8 daily, 44 weekly, but a company may apply to the Department of Public Works, which will in turn make application with the Department of Labor, for an increase in working hours.

This application was made by the J. P. Porter Co., said Mr. Pettigrove, who were authorized to increase working hours of their employees at the Marine Wharf to 10 daily and 60 weekly. Mr. Pettigrove said this authorization doesn't automatically carry a payment of penalty overtime and his findings will be based on the prevailing practice in the Summerside locality in the construction industry.

Dramatic Turn In Paris Political Scandal Case - The leakage of French official secrets, already threatening to become a major political scandal, took a dramatic turn Wednesday.

Andre Baranes, formerly a political writer for the fellow-traveling Paris newspaper, Liberation, has not been seen since he was released after questioning by counter-espionage officers a week ago.

Baranes was named as an informer for police commissioner Jean Dides, who headed an anti-Communist intelligence network until he was suspended last week after being caught with secret defence documents he was not supposed to have.

Questioned for hours on the night of Sept. 21, Baranes arranged a 2:30 a.m. meeting with his wife near the Paris Opera.

"He was very depressed," Mrs. Baranes said. She reported her husband has not been home since and she has no idea of his whereabouts.

MAY ISSUE WARRANT - If he fails to appear today, a warrant for his arrest may be issued.

News that secret information has been leaking from the national defence council into Communist hands broke seven days ago and has created a sensation.

See Little Chance For Early Boost In Personnel At Summerside Airport

Little change is foreseen in the present number of personnel or type of operation at R.C.A.F. Station Summerside if present policy is continued by navy and air force planners, according to senior spokesmen for these two services who met on Tuesday and Wednesday with Prince Edward Island press and radio representatives who were making a two day tour of naval and airforce defence and training establishments in Nova Scotia.

The establishments visited by the newsmen included the Maritime operational squadrons, and the search and rescue unit at Greenwood; the naval air station near Dartmouth; the naval dockyard, and the Maritime Air Command at Halifax.

The work of the R.C.A.F. station at Summerside is linked in various ways with each of these establishments. The lack of accommodation for the particular requirements of the 108 Search and Rescue Unit was one of the main factors that prevented the transfer of this unit from R.C.A.F. Station Greenwood, Nova Scotia, to R.C.A.F. Station Summerside, according to Group Captain N.S.A. Anderson, senior air staff officer of Maritime Air Command at Halifax.

Another factor which influenced the change in plans he said, was the fact that most of the search and rescue operations take place off the Eastern Nova Scotia seacoast which gives Greenwood a flying time advantage of about one hour over that from Summerside.

Another advantage which Greenwood enjoys in the maritime operational role, he said, is the fact that this Nova Scotia air station is the only one in the province which is authorized to handle "open weather" in which planes can land and take off in accordance with R.C.A.F. requirements.

PROBLEM ELIMINATED - One reason for considering moving the unit from Greenwood, he said, had been the crowded conditions on the station in regard to hangar and servicing facilities.

With the transfer of the operation to Summerside, and the construction of two new and larger hangars, this problem does not now exist at Greenwood.

The training program at Summerside, in regard to maritime or marine operations, is divided into two parts with the airforce using the Summerside station as a home base for the operational training unit while the navy use the station as a home base for one squadron of Avenger aircraft.

Group Captain Chapman, the commanding officer of R.C.A.F. Station Greenwood said the prospect of any reduction in the number of crews required from Summerside seemed most unlikely so far as the operational training unit at Summerside was concerned.

He explained that the retirement of commissioned officers, who have enlisted for three to five years, is a steady demand created by the formation of various new squadrons indicated that any reductions in the present R.C.A.F. training program at Summerside would appear to be most unlikely.

The single engine Avenger aircraft used by the naval unit at Summerside is easily distinguished from the large-engine Lancasters used by the operational training unit, and while both are primarily concerned with the same task, each appears to have its own advantages for particular duties in maritime operations.

In actual operations the Avenger is designed and intended to operate from an aircraft carrier. The naval training station at Dartmouth, known as the main training and maintenance base for all naval aircraft which are not aboard the sea-going Canadian aircraft carrier H.M.C.S. Magnificent.

However, due to several factors, including shortage of accommodation at the Dartmouth base, and the amount of air traffic in and out of this airport which also serves as the commercial airport for the entire Halifax district, it was decided to use the facilities available at Summerside to serve as a home base for one squadron.

This naval unit is not a large one when compared with the personnel of the airforce maritime operational training unit, and the present aircraft which are doing a phase of their training in Western Canada is required to be absent from the station frequently for training purposes. The families of the married naval fliers, however, make their homes at Summerside.

NEW EQUIPMENT - Both the navy and airforce in Maritime Command are, by modification and the addition of new equipment, making the best possible use of day standards, are almost obsolete.

In each case, however, they are rapidly approaching a transition period in which they will be equipped with new types of aircraft containing the latest and most modern equipment.

Research Chief

Dr. Frederick H. Sanders of Ottawa (above), in charge of long-term projects at Defence Research Board headquarters, has been named chief of the board's division A. He will direct DRB activities in the fields of naval research and telecommunications and also become scientific adviser to the chief of the naval staff.

Appeal Court Upholds Montreal Closing By-law

MONTREAL, (CP) - The Quebec Court of Appeals by a 3-to-2 judgment today upheld the validity of a Montreal by-law requiring stores to close on four holy days of the Roman Catholic Church.

The by-law as adopted Nov. 2, 1951, by a single-vote majority of the city council and ordered the stores in the city to close on Epiphany Day Jan. 6, Ascension Day in May, All Saints Day Nov. 1 and Immaculate Conception Day Dec. 8.

TEST BY-LAW - Seven of the city's largest stores challenged the by-law in the courts. The Quebec superior court held that the by-law was unconstitutional and beyond the powers of both the Quebec legislature and the Montreal city council.

The Appeal Court reversed the superior court decision by its majority judgment. Appeal Court justices Alme Marchand, Edouard Rinfret and Paul Casey held that the by-law was valid. Dissenting were Chief Justice Antonin Gauthier and Mr. Justice Gregor Barclay.

Counsel for the stores had argued that only Parliament can pass a law relating to crime and providing a criminal penalty. While the case was before the court hundreds of stores defied the by-law and remained open. They were served summons and their court appearances were delayed pending the Appeal Court's decision.

Maximville Man Burned To Death In Fire At Home Yesterday Morning

Antoine Arsenault, aged 77 years, was burned to death yesterday morning at Maximville, near Wellington, in a fire which completely destroyed the house in which he was living with his daughter, Lydia, aged 51 years.

The cause of the fire, which broke out about 11:30 in an adjoining shed is unknown. The blaze spread so quickly to the house that Mr. Arsenault was unable to reach safety and it is presumed that he became confused by the smoke and fumes and could not find an exit.

His daughter Lydia did, however, manage to get out of the house before the flames had made too much headway.

An alarm was sent in to the Wellington Fire Department and although they responded quickly the house was almost completely destroyed when they arrived at the scene. All furniture and personal effects were lost.

The property belonged to Mr. Patrick Barriault and as far as could be learned last evening it was partially covered by insurance.

Coroner Dr. Wilfred Callaghan decided yesterday that an inquest into the cause of death was not necessary.
