Stoves! Stoves! Stoves!

New and Improved Style.

For Economy, Comfort and Cheapness, can't be beat.

JUST RECEIVED AT ORWELL CHEAP STORE,

Stone, a new Stock of the almost everlasting Yarrowith, N. S. STOVES, with Single and Double Ovens for Cooking. ALSO, Large and Small Franklin & Box Stoves. For School-houses, Churches, &c.

They will be sold on favorable terms, if taken during this month, so as to make room for other Fall Supplies. In use, they take up so much room, and Stoves one half in price, besides much valuable time, which is equal to money. They have given general satisfaction, and persons who have used them for the last five years, and who are ready to testify to their usefulness. The readiness with which they impart great heat, has been remarked by all who use them, and in all dwellings as well as new have been productive of great comfort, while they do not cost more than the old brick or stone chimneys, which take up so much room, and are now being generally thrown down. They are supplied with large metal Boilers, very useful for drying purposes, making soap, or preparing fuel for cutting, and can be kept constantly in use, at a very small cost for fuel, and without the least risk from fire. In short, the great advantages to be derived from these wonderful, economical, and unsurpassing STOVES can only be known from a trial of them, and farmers and others are now invited to come and select for themselves, before the cold winter sets in upon them.

The present Stock of STOVES have the use and improved WAGONS, that can be cleaned with the risk of moving them. This is a decided advantage lately added to be had at the ORWELL CHEAP STORE, cheaper than elsewhere. Contact Store on the Island, where the greater variety of GOODS may be found, from a NEEDLE to an ANCHOR, both included. P. STEPHENS.
Oswell, October 14, 1863.

WANTED,

LITERATURE. NOVEMBER.

Today the moaning of the bitter wind
Rhymes with the plashing of the chilly rain,
Chanting a mournful monotone of pain:
And Autumn's sad, soft eyes with tears are blind.

A cold, gray stillness sleeps above the land—
All that was bright and beautiful is gone;
Each day we fear that, ere another dawn,
The Frost-King will uplift his icy hand.

The busy farmer's harvesting is done:
The great barns overflow with golden stores,
And ruddy boys, as they close the doors
"Hurray! hurray! for Winter, and for fun!"

And the old homesteads swarm with faces fair—
"Four generations, all told," grandpa says,
Gathered to celebrate, with joy and prayer,
The happy feast of thanksgiving and praise.

A PHYSICIAN'S STORY.

I had been some years engaged in the practice of medicine in one of our largest cities, before I met with any serious adventure. One night as I was returning home through a lonely, little frequented part of the city, at a late hour, from a patient I had been with since noon of that day, and whom I was now permitted to leave by reason of a favorable change, I was suddenly stopped in a dark, gloomy, out-of-way spot, by a gruff, coarse-dressed man.

"You're a doctor!" he both announced and inquired in the same words.

"I am."

"I want you to come with me then!" he said, in a tone that indicated the matter was already settled in his mind, however it might be in mine.

"I cannot to-night," I answered, with positive emphasis; "I am all wearied out, and anxious to get home."

"Yes, you doctors are always wearied out when a poor man calls you!" said the fellow, with a threatening growl; "but only let some snob's wife's poodle dog need looking to, and you find your way there at any hour of the day or night. Well, I'm no snob, thank heaven! and I've got money enough to pay your fee,—I've tried half a dozen doctors already, and none of them will come—and so, you see I can't let you off."

"But, really—"

"See here, doctor," interrupted the fellow, producing a knife, and flashing the blade by a quick flourish before my eyes. "I'm a desperate man, and my wife has pushed me to do a wicked deed. Every man sets a certain value on his own life, and also on the life of his best and dearest friend. You know how much your life's worth to you, and I know how much another's life is worth to me; and, for heaven, I swear if you attempt to go and leave my friend to die, I'll put this knife into you!"

"It was an open space where we stood, about half-way between two blocks of new buildings that were not yet tenanted. I looked up and down the dark street, but not a soul was in sight.

"Where do you wish me to go?" I inquired.

"Oh, down here a piece," he said, jerking his thumb over his shoulder. "Come on, before it is too late!"

He passed his arm through mine, without so much as "by your leave," and began to move away, of course taking me with him.

"Is your friend a male or female?"

"She's a woman."

I breathed free—for somehow I always experienced a degree of security among the opposite sex, even among the most depraved and abandoned.

"What is the matter with her? and how long has she been ill?" I questioned.

"About three or four hours ago she gave birth to a child that didn't live more'n a minute, and since then she's been having fits," was the reply.

"Was there no physician with her when the child was born?" I inquired.

"No, I couldn't get one for her love or money. An old woman, a neighbor, came in and did what she could. Do you think as how you can save her, Doctor?" inquired the man in a husky tone.

"I cannot say of course—but I will promise to do the best I can."

"Oh, do, do, and heaven will bless you for it!" he rejoined, in a tone that expressed a more deep and earnest feeling than I had supposed was in his nature.

I began to be interested; the man might be better than I had thought; so my poor fellow, perhaps, who had been the football of fortune, and had not received his deserts.

"Is the woman your wife?" I kindly inquired.

"I believe he heard me; but as he did not answer, I concluded not to repeat the question.

We soon turned into some small, mean, dark, narrow streets, where none but the poor classes live. We now walked forward in silence—the man, who still held of my arm, as if he were afraid I might otherwise give him the slip, taking long, rapid strides, and causing me no little
