When Sewing Cover a brick with padding and you will find it a convenience in the sewing room for pinning any article that must be held tightly while the work is being done.

The Book Mark An ordinary rubber band makes an ideal book mark. Just snap it over the pages that have been read, lengthwise of the book.

Scissors To avoid accidents when children are around, keep a cork or an empty spool over the point of the scissors.

How Can I III

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I make smooth edges when cutting butter pads? A. A small piece of waxed paper held over the snap edge of a small paring knife when cutting the butter into squares make butter pads with smooth and even edges.

Q. How can I remove fingermarks from the piano and other polished furniture? A. Rub with a soft cloth dipped in alcohol. Follow this by polishing with a soft chamois.

Q. How can I avoid shine on dull-finished ribbons? A. Dull-finished ribbons should be pressed on the wrong side. This will prevent shine.

New Twist For Gingerbread

Gingerbread is always a favorite with children and here is a new twist for serving it. It's gingerbread with lemon sauce and cream cheese whip.

Bake gingerbread in a shallow pan, using your favorite recipe, or one of the prepared gingerbread mixes. Cool. Blend one eight ounce package of cream cheese with a small amount of milk, whipping with a spoon until the cheese is light and fluffy.

Cut the gingerbread into squares and split them in half crosswise. For each serving place half of a gingerbread square on a plate, cover it first with hot or cold tart lemon sauce, then with the other half square, gingerbread.

Top each serving with a generous amount of the whipped cream cheese.

HOW MUCH SLEEP IS NEEDED?

I have written before of a neighbor awakening me very early one morning, inviting me to go fishing with him. As I had other plans for the day I had refused his invitation but asked him why his usual fishing companion was not with him.

The question sometimes arises as to just how much sleep an adult needs but we can readily understand that where infection is present—teeth, tonsils, gums, gallbladder—much more sleep is usually required.

In a recent article by a research physician and a dentist, they reported that when the adult was in good health, not constipated, and free of infection, all the sleep he needs to keep him well, willing and able to get up in the morning, is about seven hours.

While the usual advice is to take eight hours sleep at night, it would seem that many healthy adults do require the eight hours.

What may be a factor in the need of sleep is that many of these healthy adults have acquired the habit of sleeping eight hours at night and believe they feel tired during the day if they do not obtain it.

The thought then is that while our research workers have found that seven hours sound sleep is enough for the average healthy adult, habit and infection are factors in some cases.

BRACKLEY POINT W. I.

The February meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Howard Cudmore on Feb. 11. Fourteen members and one visitor were present. Roll call was answered by an exchange of books.

The visiting committee reported two cards sent, and it was decided to send bowl of tulips to resident ill in hospital. New committees for the following three months: Mrs. Willard McCallum and Mrs. George Shaw. Mrs. Edward McCallum visited the school and supplied towels and soap.

The convener's letter, always read with much interest, mentioned the anniversary of Founder's Day, and also strongly urged that more groups participate in the Twentieth contest.

Special interest was shown in the Institute scrap book which was on display at this meeting. Collection was $3.30.

Mrs. Gregor McCallum was hostess to the March meeting on the evening of the 4th, when members and one visitor attended. Interesting Irish jokes in response to roll call afforded much amusement.

Plans were made for the monthly social evening in the hall, members to take lunch, card tables etc. It was pleasing to note that there were no sick calls during the month. Mrs. K. Stewart reported for the school that shaper, yard stick and toilet tissue had been purchased. Mrs. Fenton McClure will visit the school in March.

The corresponding secretary read a letter of appeal for the Red Cross Campaign and reported sending for remnant parcels, and some booklets. Program topic for the month was "Education of Our Youth," and under the leadership of Mrs. Willard McCallum a discussion took place on this subject, followed by a contest which sharpened up the wits of all present. Collection was $3.25.

Next meeting will be held in Howes' hall, roll call to be answered by household hints or questions.

Mrs. Gregor McCallum will have charge of program, topic "Agriculture." Lunch will be served at both meetings by the hostess and the usual happy social hour enjoyed.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN Her Bachelor Friend

Widow Knows He Is Aware Of Her Love, But He Never Tells His Intentions

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a widow and have been keeping company with a bachelor for some time. Although he's younger than I am, he acts much older. He knows I am very much in love with him, but never lets me know what his intentions are concerning me.

ANSWER: The cogent point in your problem is that, while you are anxious to marry, your bachelor friend is perfectly satisfied with his present life, and has no desire to change it. Don't lose sight of the fact that he has remained unmarried of his own accord, has undoubtedly had many ladies more than willing to take on his name, yet has successfully avoided all of them.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a man of 45 keeping company with a divorcee of 28. I knew her husband, and don't blame her for getting a divorce from him. She has two children. I intend to marry her and adopt the children.

ANSWER: You have such an obsession for order that it's doubtful if a house with small children will ever suit you. No matter how tidy a woman is, youngsters are bound to create some disorder around a home.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a 16-year-old senior engaged to a boy in the same grade. He attends school in another town, so I don't see him too often.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a 16-year-old boy. Your lad enjoys your company when he's with you, but just can't see the importance of deluging you with mail, especially when he's undoubtedly tied up with studies.

The Stars Say - -

By Genevieve Kumble

For Tomorrow

ON this Sunday, intellectual pursuits should prove profitable as well as a means of relaxation after the work week. Plans conceived now should be relatively easy of enactment in the near future. Remember, however, that most worthwhile goals take time for achievement, so do not become impatient because of temporary delays.

During the evening hours the stars indicate exceptionally fine relationship with both friends and business associates, and there obtain it. Another factor entering into the need of sleep is the amount of rest, of sitting or lying down, during the day.

One outstanding example of being able to keep well and bright mentally on just four hours sleep is the great inventor, Thomas Edison. However, these four hours were entirely without interruption as he was hard of hearing. Also it is told that at times, though keenly interested in his inventive work, he would lie down on a couch for a long or short period several times a day.

The thought then is that while our research workers have found that seven hours sound sleep is enough for the average healthy adult, habit and infection are factors in some cases.

Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson

NO BRILLIANCE NEEDED

Almost all good plays look easy on paper, but the truth is that these same plays are overlooked time and again at the bridge table—and by players who really have no excuse for their carelessness. Consider this deal. The key play by declarer could scarcely be simpler, but we have seen the same type of play missed on countless occasions.

West dealer. Both sides vulnerable. East-West 600 score.

Hand: ♠ K 8 2, ♥ 10 9, ♦ Q J 7 3, ♣ 7 6 4. West: ♠ A 7 6 4, ♥ Q J 8, ♦ A K 5, ♣ 3. East: ♠ N, ♥ E, ♦ S, ♣ J 10 9 3. South: ♠ A K 4, ♥ A K, ♦ A K J, ♣ 10 8.

The bidding: West North East South 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ 2 ♣ Dble. Pass Pass Pass

It is true that with the partnership situation that it was, West had some reason to suspect (or hope) that South was stretching his overall, but the double of two spades was nevertheless risky. What's more, even if the double had had the modest success that was quite possible, East-West would have sold out too cheaply, and in view of the actual outcome, the cost of the double was enormous.

West laid down the king of diamonds, but when the dummy appeared, along with East's four-spade, West quickly shifted to his singleton club. East cashed the king and ace, then returned the club jack to let West ruff away South's queen.

If South had actually played the club queen, routine defense would have defeated the contract. After ruffing, West would only have to lead the ace and another trump, thereby reducing dummy to one trump and insuring that South could ruff only one card, a club or a heart, but not both.

South, however, thought twice about sending his club queen to slaughter. Then, having given due consideration to what most players would think of as merely a "natural play," South did not cover the club jack—he ducked. That made quite a difference, because now there was no defense. East shifted to trumps and his partner took out two rounds, but South simply ruffed his losing heart, drew trumps, and finally cashed the club queen for the fulfilling trick.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"My hostess is a dear, Ellen," a friend of the family who sometimes shares distant scenes with us wrote recently. She is one who in summer vacations in this Province; but once the blue and gold days set a quiet hush on the autumn hills and there are touches of color in the trees, she is off like a migrating bird to some warmer clime. And so, appreciating that we enjoy traveling through such letters received she occasionally writes. Not so much of the places of note that she has visited but more especially she gives us nice glimpses of the people she meets—the little details which make up so much of folks' lives and living.

"She is a woman in her sixties," she wrote, "neither short nor tall, not fat though inclined to rounded lines. She is, I consider one of the most attractive women I have ever met but not at all beautiful or chic. I can't say just where her charm lies. Perhaps it's her laugh—it's so merry and sincere. But no, it is deeper than that; it's as if everything she does and says has been especially blessed. She makes me think of that old Bible verse when she speaks. 'In her tongue is the law of kindness.'"

And what else have we posted this week in our book of remembrance? Sun of March warming the fields; brick clean wind breezing along the spruce from the afternoon lumberjacks brought in to us at the supper-hour; sprays too of pussy willows gathered by the children along the roadside while homing from school.

And one day, pretty picture that it was a squirrel sunning on a weathered fence rail curled to us as we walked a long mile. Down, too, on a page of memory are the earnest faces and lips of the band of women from the farms about gathered in sunny Church pews in observance of the Annual World Day of Prayer.

We know the drab of the farm-lands as pictured there—sparsely white-patched and quiet in their rest as they await the trumpet-call of spring-birds, sweeter than that of the crows which here and there about in harsh caws remind us now of their presence.

And also in this interval of waiting, here by the window in a farmhouse, a woman steals time from her housework to put precious loops in a rug in the making and there in another old practice of the season a farm-go out for a smoke, between acts in a theater, leaving his woman companion in her seat? A. This is the height of rudeness, unless there are others in the party to entertain her. Even in this case, it is not the most courteous act.

Q. When a college man invites a girl to a college week-end, who should pay her hotel accommodations and meals while she is there? A. The man should pay these expenses.

Morning Smile

The late noted escape artist, Harry Houdini, once performed that one of his best performances failed to draw an audience. The fiasco occurred in Scotland, when the wily artist, securely trussed in handcuffs and leg-irons, leaped into a river from the centre of a high bridge.

"Do you know," complained Houdini, "that not a single Scot came out to watch me?"

"How do you account for it?" he was asked.

"Toll bridge," was the laconic answer.
