

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 22, 1893.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The following definition of a teacher by the late Principal Thring, is worthy of being printed in letters of gold over the front entrance of every schoolhouse in the land.

A produce dealer hits at our good friend of the plow in this manner: "Talk about speculators, there isn't a greater one than the farmer. If the price of any product goes up he never wants to sell, no matter how high the price he always wants more."

The Salvation Army cannot well be expected to move north. The general is rich in resources and plans for the extension of the Army. One of the latest moves is a scheme for a big exhibit of grain in Toronto on the same dates as the Toronto Industrial. The Army purpose inviting invitations on the first of September to hold harvest festivals throughout the country and every crop will be asked to send to the exhibition to be held at Toronto whatever they can collect in the shape of produce.

At the time of the French-Canadian national congress, which was held July 9th, Mr. Justice Jette gave considerable offence to the Irish Catholic clergy by stating that the latter ethnic were hostile to the Irish clergy of the French language, and that in Brunswick especially, the Irish clergy were far from being in sympathy with their French co-religionists.

Charles Woodworth London, now dean of the Conservatory of Music at Michigan College, has been chosen to be the musical faculty in place of Mr. A. A. Mack, resigned. Mr. London comes to Sackville with recommendations of the highest order not only as a teacher of great success but as a thorough scholar in the literature of music.

Franklin Leach, of Sweden, has been engaged as teacher of vocal culture, vice Miss Anna Mack, resigned. She is a graduate of the Conservatory of Music, and a pupil of Hans Hasselback.

Formerly of Sussex, of Roxbury, Conn., Miss Alice Haggerty, has also accepted a position upon the staff of the Ladies' College as one of the assistants of Prof. Hanson in the fine arts department.

Mr. J. M. S. VICTORIA. Surgeon Moon's Account of the Disaster Written to His Brother in Toronto. The following extract is taken from a letter relating to his escape, written by Surgeon J. Agnew Moon to his brother, Mr. Robert Moon, of the Legal and Commercial Exchange, Toronto.

A very enjoyable time was spent at the concert in Coleman Hall on the night of the 17th, when a lengthy and well selected programme was carried out in such a manner as reflected much credit on those who took part in it.

In Norway persons who have not been vaccinated are not allowed to vote at any election. Seven hundred hogs per day are being slaughtered at the new pork packery in London, Ont.

The use of torture in legal proceedings was permissible in Austria until well into the present century. Japanese doctors never present bills to their patients. They are awarded the patient's inclination to pay, when his thankful acceptance whatever sum is offered.

For thirty years the beard of a man named Whorton, in Webster county, W. Va., has been entirely grey. Now it is turning black, its original color in its eighty-ninth year.

MEETING AT McLEOD'S HALL.

Interesting Address on Temperance by the Most Worthy Patriarch C. A. Everett, Esq., of the National Division of the Sons of Temperance was warmly greeted at McLeod's Hall, last night, by a good representative and appreciative audience.

Mr. Everett reviewed the history of the temperance reform movement in Canada and the New England States from the organization in 1847 of Gurney Division of the Sons of Temperance, of which he was a member, till the present day.

At the close of Mr. Everett's address, Past Grand Worthy Patriarch J. W. Morrison, Chappelle and Crabbe, Rev. Mr. Hanly and Bros. Scott and Bowers offered interesting remarks. A hearty vote of thanks having been tendered the M.W.P., to which they neatly and suitably replied, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

MOUNT ALLISON.

Some of the Teachers in the University, The Sackville, N. B., Educational Institutions seem to be well prepared in all their branches for the work of the ensuing year. The following notes in regard to the Ladies' College are gleaned from an exchange.

Madam Dalpe who was so successful in the French classes in the Ladies' College last year has been re-engaged. R. K. Dumas, B. A., of Toronto, has been engaged to teach natural science and mathematics at the Ladies' College, for the coming year.

Charles Woodworth London, now dean of the Conservatory of Music at Michigan College, has been chosen to be the musical faculty in place of Mr. A. A. Mack, resigned. Mr. London comes to Sackville with recommendations of the highest order not only as a teacher of great success but as a thorough scholar in the literature of music.

GLEANINGS.

A short time ago the American newspaper contained full accounts of the honors paid to the remains of Jefferson Davis in the South. No angry feeling was caused thereby. They have been regarded as proper, or, at all events as would have been the same sort of demonstration ten years or even five years ago, would have stirred up a great deal of angry discussion and have led to the same kind of sectional feeling that Governor Nichol of Wisconsin stirred up by the return of the battle flag.

There is a little book just published, "The Winter Hours and other Poems," by Robert Underwood Johnson (the Century Co.), which is well worth procuring. It is not an attempt to float a hundred poor poems by one good one. It is a little volume of only ninety pages, and contains no poor work. The four lyrics which intersperse it are all gems, and this is a very rare thing, since the lyrics in a longer poem are apt to prove opiate, not stimulant. Here is a specimen, and a very beautiful one. It is a something which sings itself—

When November's night comes down With a dark and sudden frown, Like belated traveller chill, Hurrying 'er the tawny hill, Higher, higher Where a warmer friend than fire? Song's but solace for a day; Wine's a traitor not to trust; Love's a kiss and then away; Time's a peddler deals in dust; Higher, higher Pile the driftwood in a jere! Where's a firmer friend than fire? Knowledge was but born to-night; Wisdom, to be born to-morrow; One more log—and banish sorrow, One more branch—the world is bright. Higher, higher, Crown with laurel—boughs the prey! Where's an older friend than fire?

It is curious how unable the Americans are to do anything in a reasonable way. Extravagant in their mode of living, always very extravagant in their language, they appear very funny to nations who have more accurate ideas of decorum. Here is an account taken from a New York paper, of the parting between Paderewski and his female friends in New York:

Paderewski, himself half sobbing, was surrounded by so many women as could crowd around, all of them hysterical, all of them believing in a manner that, to a sane person, appeared exceedingly remarkable. Women rushed forward and threw themselves against the edge of the stage, leaning as far over as possible, and adding languishing looks to their applause as an incentive for the solo. Students in the house stood up, many waved handkerchiefs, and all screamed. Women, ranging in age from 15 to 50, surrounded the man, shook his hands, begged for his autograph, and on photographs, begged him to return soon, and talked German and French at the now half-hysterical pianist; left him, to return for another word, or another hand-clasp, sighed, giggled, laughed, cried, posed, languished. He kissed the hands of some, not with the ordinary polite pretence of a kiss, but with a warm, rebounding kiss that made those who were not so favored glare horribly at those who were.

And Paderewski has also stirred the American poet to pour forth his soul in song. One hard-hauls him as a giant with the amber hair, slender-limbed and swan-like, and then goes on to pathetically inform him: "Then has troaked us, And from our pockets drawn the hard-earned dollars."

Then he is asked to "Come off, for in thy tangled hair, Steel-like writ and nimble figure, Like a bird, or a bird of prey, There is more music than in mine's souls. Our dollars to command are thine. Ignace Jan, our own, that is, And only Paderewski!"

We often have had our laugh over Western journalism, as represented in the good old days of the Arizona Kicker, when the profession was carried on as much with a Colt's revolver as a pen. It is a mistake, however, to imagine that it is in the nature of the profession, as following a refreshing extract will show. The names are suppressed, not wishing to render THE EXAMINER an action for slander:

"The invariable donkey who presides over the... and who furnishes to the least intelligent element of our population their weekly journalistic publication in the dreary columns of a mortgagee printed on a Campbell press, which is not yet paid for, and purloined type, has seen fit to take me for a text in answer to some newspaper criticism of his management of the... The matter, in so far as it relates to me, is a tissue of falsehood. In the discharge of my duty I have had occasion to point out the extraordinary length of... ears, to expose the falsity of his claims to be a reformer, and to prevent unscrupulous tradesmen from being remorselessly plucked by him. Even the boldest New York editor who wears with the utmost persistent hypocrisy."

"Everybody who has ever come near him knows that it is only a cad, a puffed up bladder, a milk-pup, a bankrupt through his own indulgence at the expense of others, a battered parasite at Dave's table, a pauper who has found his level in the vilest mire of Bohemia, and the Jack Sheppard of local politics."

The editor who in the above was written did not hesitate what to do. He armed himself with the editorial bludgeon and the next issue of his paper contained the following courteous report: "Even the boldest New York editor who wears with the utmost persistent hypocrisy."

"He stands before the people as much covered with infamy as Lazarus was with leprosy. He is a parasite on the life of his nation, and his classical allusion in the last sentence must have hurt the rival editor very much."

THE CASE SETTLED.—The Montreal City Council have settled one of the numerous lawsuits now pending there. A Miss Woods filed an action against the city for the sewer under construction two or three years ago. She sued the city, claiming $1,500 damages. The case has dragged along from court to court until the present time, and the suit has cost the city over $900. The city paying half the bondsmen for the sewer contractor the other half.

Lost His Money. MONTREAL, July 22. John Thompson, a native of P. E. Island, who arrived here last evening from the Northern States, en route for St. John, with $250 in gold in his pocket, was relieved of every cent of his hard gained earnings by two confidence men.

Trade Returns. OTTAWA, July 22. The trade returns for the past fiscal year have been issued. The exports are valued at $187,665, an increase of $1,250,000. The imports are set down at $121,463,617, a decrease of $6,000,000. The duty collected amounted to $21,181,872, an increase of $611,000.

Who He Was. ST. JOHN, July 22. It is pretty certain that the William Ingram, "of Nova Scotia," reported by cable dispatches as having been killed at Londonbury, Ireland, is William Ingram, of St. Martin's, N. B. He formerly ran a hotel in that village.

Death of a Princess. LONDON, July 22. Princess Amelia, wife of Baron Paul Hugel, younger sister of the Duke of Teck, died yesterday. The Princess was an aunt of Princess May.

A GIRL WHO SHEDS NEEDLES. How They Get Into Her Anatomy Proves a Puzzling Question. The most startling surmise in Western Pennsylvania are laddled by the strange case of Melvina Morford, of Mercer county, who is a living needle cushion. An operation has been performed in which ten needles were taken from the flesh of her right forearm, between elbow and fingers, the latest of many similar operations during the past two years, and the needles as apparently all at the place named, and as many as forty have been taken out at an operation; the actual number now being 184 needles, with one pin. The needles are allowed to protrude until they are extracted with forceps.

Mr. Loebhead will give instruction in all branches of art-drawing, and painting in water color, oil, gouache and tapestry, from casts, life, still life, and natural. Classes will also be formed in sketching from nature. Orders taken for portraits. For terms, apply to Mr. Loebhead, Studio, Dundas Esplanade, before the 1st of August. j22 1w
