

Happenings Of The Week

President Dwight C. Eisenhower's friends throughout the world were happy that he is recovering. A Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell's aspirational and practical book "The Practice and Power of Prayer." Dr. Bonnell cites a notable instance from the President's war experience.

On the night of July 10-11, 1943, a vast armada of 3,000 ships containing 80,000 Allied soldiers sailed across the waters from Malta to the shores of Sicily in a great amphibious operation. General Eisenhower, surrounded by his staff officers, stood on a high hill overlooking Malta harbor. In the light of a full moon shining down on the sea he watched the troopships weigh anchor and sail into the mist while squadrons of planes roared into the sky.

Deeply moved, Eisenhower sprang to attention and saluted his heroic men. Then he bowed his head in silent prayer—his staff joining him in this brief act of devotion. Turning to an officer beside him, Eisenhower said: "There comes a time when you've used up your brains, your training, your technical skill, and the die is cast and the events are in the hands of God, and there you have to leave them." Dr. Bonnell gives thanks for a national leader with such faith and there are many prayers for President Eisenhower's restoration to health.

Martin - Roach Vows Solemnized At St. Dunstan's

A pretty late summer wedding of interest was solemnized in St. Dunstan's Basilica, Charlottetown, on August 27, 1955, at 10 a.m. when Helen Edith, daughter of Mrs. Mary Roach, Charlottetown, was united in marriage to Constable William Gordon Martin, son of Mrs. Helen Martin, Niagara Falls, Ont., and the late Mr. Gilbert Martin.

Rev. Eric Robin performed the double-ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. Seated in the Sanctuary was Rev. Francis Corcoran, Mrs. Joseph Duggan was organist and Mr. Loman McAulay sang "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register. Several hymns were sung by Messrs. Fred Pound, Loman McAulay, Kenneth McKenzie and Cecil Santry.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Watson MacKinnon, the bride chose a gown with a fitted bodice having a portrait neckline and full ballerina-length skirt. The long sleeves ended in points over the hands. Her chapel veil of tulle illusion was held by a headdress of pearl covered tulle and applied book with white satin streamers and white velvet petals and she wore a heart-shaped ruby necklace, the gift of the groom.

Miss Bernadette Trainor as maid of honor, and Miss Mary Shyanah, bridesmaid, were in ballerina-length gowns of brocade satin of yellow and blue, respectively. They wore matching bandeaus and carried white prayerbooks.

Constable Joseph Vateski as best man and Constables McIntosh and McKinnon were the ushers.

The mother of the bride chose a corse of brown bengaline costume and a corsage of yellow carnations. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother for sixty guests. The table was decorated with a three-tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom. Multi-colored gladioli were also used. The toast to the bride was proposed by Constable Vateski. The couple left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and then to Ottawa where they will reside while the groom is attached to Division "A", R.C.M.P. For travelling the bride wore a pale pink nylon silk frock, black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

October now! Month of falling, crisp leaves, of pinyish down in hazle bush and beech tree—and finally of dark-clad aged witches scouting across the face of the moon which belongs to the hunters and hounds.

And back we would go to wander in the months that are past. Back to the harvest fields and the happy sun-filled time of the hay—and before that to the lush flower-filled unshorn meadows, and beyond to the new greens and fresh reds of the springtime.

"There's just no sense to it, Ellen," one of kin said not long ago when we sighed over loved ones and friends who have gone. "You know we can't bring back the past. Who would want to live in it anyway?" she smiled.

"There's too much in the present that is good. And the future," she chuckled confidently, "you just never know what's waiting around a corner. That's a time for ships to come in."

So we shall leave now the promise and blossoms and fullness of former seasons behind (But a frog calls to us from a lilypond of its days, a butter fly, remembered, wings by; there are seas of daisies beneath the keel of a summer-moon friends-of-birds make love and build and nest... and dear, dear, it is difficult to let those hours pass forever!) and enjoy these October brings in gift.

She, we fancy is a nut-brown maiden, brown of hair, dark of eye, a reserved thoughtful lass, though gracious, quiet and serene. Her wardrobe—how varied! Very beautiful the costumes she chooses to wear as she walks the fields of the farmlands.

This we recall was a week of broken weather, one which chary of harvest-breeze and sun, nevertheless lent some time for righting stooks, to our farmers and also opportunities for them to fence these seasonal pieces of it which allows altered and changes of, pasture to the cattle.

So with our days pleasantly busy and full, another week goes now into time that is past. Time we still have—minutes at weekend to reflect, among other items, on the color and loveliness of season deepening about.

Where did God find colors such as these That tint the flaming sunset, and the clouds Dipped in pale mauve and softest shades of rose—

And autumn trees wrapped in their golden shrouds Of gleaming yellow, orange and bright red? Where did He dip his brush for goldenrod That clothes a naked fence-line with its charm? From whence came fertile colors of the sod?

Oh, we who would paint on canvas, God's good earth With our poor brush and lowly palette knife, Can be no equal to This Artist's touch.

Nor mix His colors on the road of life; For only of the spirit could this be— The tender scene He paints for you and me."

Until Monday —Diary—Good-night
