A MARTYR TO STYLE.

I wonder what's happened to my folks. They used to be simple and plain. But ever since father began to get rich they've been doing a lot of queer things. My mother's been doing a lot of queer things. But the funniest thing she has done was to purchase a "cute little velvet suit." To put on her overgrown son.

She bought me a collar a full foot wide. A bow that's a foot and a half. And the very first time that I went on the street.

Gosh, how the fellows did laugh! Then Tom Brown, the oldest of all of my friends.

Who knew well that Bill was my name, Tipped a sly wink to the rest of the boys, And "Sweet William" my title became.

I can stand lots of chaff, but I couldn't stand that.

"Sweet William" just settled the biz. So I took off my little black velvet coat And I'm going to teach my friend Tommy, If in any way he persists, Although I don't wear the same old clothes, I do wear the same old fags. —M. H. W. in Brooklyn Eagle.

A BRAVE PRINCE.

The Heroism of Duke Charles of Bavaria in a Theater Fire.

The bravery of battle is surpassed in the quality and fier of its intrepidity by the courage which faces a conflagration or a wreck, because the heroic valor is helped out by patriotism, except do corps and other emotions which have a distinct place in the soldier's heart. The great charity League fire at Paris, and particularly the heroic death of the Duchess d'Alençon, recalls a brave exploit of this lady's uncle, Duke Charles of Bavaria, many years ago.

It was in 1823, and some sort of exceptional representation at the Residenz theater at Munich had attracted a large and brilliant audience. Duke Charles was seated in the royal box. Suddenly an attendant rushed in and whispered excitedly:

"Your highness, the theater is on fire! Make your escape before the panic breaks out."

This alarming announcement did not cause a change of expression on the prince's face. First satisfying himself by a word of inquiry that the stage was really on fire, the prince rose, stepped calmly to the front of the box and said to the audience:

"I am informed that a fire has broken out on the stage. There is time enough for you all to get out before the danger becomes imminent. The only thing that you have to fear is a panic. I urge you, therefore, to quit the hall in the most perfect order, and I give you my word that if you do so you will all escape. To prove that I mean what I say I shall now sit down and shall not leave my seat until the last one of the audience is out of the house."

Duke Charles then sat down as unmoved as if the performance was to proceed. The sight of his calmness reassured the audience, and the people moved deliberately out in an orderly manner; the flames burst through the curtain to the proscenium; the people looked at Duke Charles, who still sat imperturbably in his place. No one could make a cowardly rush in the face of such an example.

In ten minutes the house was entirely emptied, no one being hurt. Duke Charles was the last to go out. In another instant the interior was all on fire, and the house was completely destroyed.—Youth's Companion.

The Thyroid Gland in Medicine.

In the past few years a remedy has been discovered for certain conditions hitherto regarded as incurable, which is certain in its action, and which for the beneficence of its results stands unrivaled in the therapeutics. The use in medicine of the thyroid gland of animals is a logical conclusion from adequate premises, and the thyroid forms one of the few medicinal agents in our possession which are not given on purely empirical grounds.

It is a generally familiar fact that the majority of drugs are prescribed because medical history records that, for some unknown reason, they have proved effectual in the diseases in which they are administered, though why they should do so remains unexplained. In certain conditions mercury has a specific action, the nature of which is absolutely unknown. Quinine had cured the Countess Chinchon—and hence the name cinchona—of her age centuries before a clever Frenchman discovered that malaria resulted from the activity in the blood of a vegetable parasite on which Peruvian bark exerts a restraining influence.

So it is with most of the remedies which the physician employs. He uses them because experience has shown that they will do good in the conditions in which he prescribes them, although he has not learned why, but in the use of animal thyroid the physician knows that he has a sovereign remedy, and he also knows the reasons for the brilliant results of its proper application.—Dr. Pearce Bailey in Popular Science Monthly.

A Wife's Awful Dread.

Once Professor Sylvester purchased a new pair of trousers and wore them to the university. His wife, who was well aware of his absentminded habits, knew nothing of the purchase. An hour or so after Professor Sylvester's arrival at the university his wife was seen rushing breathlessly down the street with a package under her arm.

Meeting one of the professors, she inquired hastily and anxiously, "Have you seen Professor Sylvester?"

"Yes," answered the astonished professor.

"Well, is he all right—is everything all right?" asked his anxious spouse.

"My dear madam," said the professor, "calm yourself. Your husband is perfectly well. I saw him but a moment ago."

"But I mean," said the almost frenzied woman, "did you notice anything peculiar about him? Did he look as he ought to look? Oh, did he—did he?"

Just then Professor Sylvester strolled around the corner with the new trousers on, to the intense relief of both his wife and the other professor.—Baltimore Sun.

Testimonial

C. P. Fletcher, Esq.

DEAR SIR, - I do not wish to return to Montreal without expressing my gratitude to you for the very excellent Bell Piano that you placed at my disposal for my recital. I have tried many Canadian Pianos of different manufacturers, and must say that, considering the size of the instrument, I have never found one to equal it for depth and brilliancy of tone. The action is quite as elastic and responsive as in American Upright Pianos of the highest grade. Again thanking you, very sincerely,

I remain,
Yours,
