More Hopeful Signs

Despite the fact that he reported the third highest deficit in peacetime history for the current fiscal year, it is expected that Finance Minister Gordon's budget for the coming year, to be delivered this evening, will help the minister to take a step towards his oft-stated goal of reducing the gap between spending and revenue.

As noted in a Canadian Press report, the total of seven consecutive annual deficits now stands at $3,569 million—six of them incurred under the past Conservative government. The preliminary estimate of a $685 million deficit for 1963-64, subject to later revision, is $30 million higher than the minister's forecast last July, when he made some major alterations to his June 13 budget, including a sharp cut in the new sales tax on building materials and production equipment.

This deficit, plus a write-off of $513 million in actuarial deficiency in superannuation funds for the armed forces and RCMP, caused the government's net bid to shoot sharply ahead to $15,136 million—a figure equivalent to $780.10 for every man, woman and child, compared with $739.50 last year. This does not include outlays for the $75 monthly old age pension now paid to all at age 70, and which if accounted for would show that combined budgetary and pension deficits are set up to $749 million less against something like $734½ million last year.

But for the coming fiscal year, several favorable factors will be at work. Canada's export trade has broken through the clouds which long hung over our balance of payments. It registered a surplus of nearly half a billion last year, thanks largely to grain shipments to Communist countries. The rise in the gross national product—6 per cent last year—shows no signs of weakening; and there is a built-in revenue boost of some $250 million from delayed-action tax increases legislated last year. There is hope, too, that the rising tide in U.S. will generate more spending activity in Canada.

Canada's Firm Support

Setting aside the objections among the Creditistes—who did not, however, force a vote on the issue—the Opposition groups gave firm support to the stand taken by the Pearson Government on the Cyprus crisis in the House of Commons Friday night. By approving of the plan to send 1,500 Canadian servicemen to the United Nations peace-keeping force immediately, they showed that Canada, in time of emergency, can speak with one voice. Undoubtedly, by their action, they contributed materially to the efforts of the U.N. secretary general in getting the full force constituted and in easing the tension caused by the Turkish invasion threat.

Noted in a Canadian Press report is the fact that nearly 50,000 Canadian servicemen have taken part in United Nations and similar duties in distant parts of the world since 1950. Most of these—22,000—served with the Canadian Brigade in the 1950-53 Korean war. Some 2,000 Canadians have served in Indochina as members of international truce supervision commissions. About 9,500 Canadian soldiers and airmen have served with the U.N. emergency force in Egypt. Another 1,700 have served for the U.N. in the Congo, and smaller bodies have performed duties in Yemen, Palestine, Kashmir and New Guinea. This is a commendable record.

As Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Friday night in supporting the motion to send the Cyprus contingent, since the U.N. founding in San Francisco Canada has taken the stand that it is a prime responsibility of all U.N. members to discharge their obligations and assure the organization of its ability to carry out its objectives, purposes, and aims. Mr. Diefenbaker suggested, however, that in future the Government, when faced with a critical situation, should follow the British practice of making obtainable to former cabinet ministers in opposition ranks the official dispatches with information on which to base their judgment.

This being Junior Red Cross Week in Canada, we would be remiss in not calling attention to the splendid work this organization is doing, not only in Canada but in more than 80 nations in the world. Over 20,000 school children in Prince Edward Island and over a million and a half young people in Canada are members of the Junior Red Cross. They are directed by a group of 40,000 teachers who serve as volunteers and carry on a project that has been active in our schools for over 40 years.

The prime interest of the Junior Red Cross is to guide children in the principles of good health, friendship and understanding. Basically, they are interested in people, particularly the young people of Canada and the world who are less fortunate.

For the time interest of the Junior Red Cross is to guide children in the principles of good health, friendship and understanding. Basically, they are interested in people, particularly the young people of Canada and the world who are less fortunate.

All of this was accomplished through their various fundraising efforts. All funds raised by the Juniors are spent by the Juniors. The administrative costs of the Junior Red Cross are the responsibility of the Canadian Red Cross Society. Therefore the fathers and mothers can share in the accomplishments of these energetic youngsters who do so much under the symbol of the Red Cross.

Will's Chances Slim

EDITORIAL NOTE

Perhaps it was nothing more than a gesture, but it was a nice one on the part of Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Soviet President Brezhnev to cable congratulations to Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip last week on the birth of their fourth child. A Soviet news agency says the two Russian leaders wished the Queen, her husband and her family "good health and happiness" and "prosperity and well being" for the people of Britain.

OTTAWA REPORT by Patrick Nicholson

Separatists Envision Own Armed Forces

Canadians in the nine non-French provinces may still be foolishly consider the Quebec Liberation Movement to be an insignificant and disorderly raiding of armories by students. But within Quebec there are Canadians who take this movement very seriously indeed, with the determined objective of attaining complete independence. This is vividly exemplified by an article in the printing "The Armies of the Independent French Republic in North America," which is printed in the current issue of a newly established French language magazine called "L'Action Nationale." The first vice president of the body sponsoring this magazine is Andre Laurendeau, a well-known author and also chairman of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism.

Rockefeller's Tactics

A Rockefeller family characteristic of persistence of character concerning that a goal sought can be won, is already exemplified in New York's Governor Nelson Rockefeller. His motto is that the odds, in what he wants to win, this man put aside his wife of 21 years, the mother of his five children, and then married a younger woman who, in order to marry him, divorced her youth-

LACK OF FACILITIES

It is this in being to your eyes that I believe is a gap in the tourist plans and provisions on the island. There are a couple of hotels, a stocky pile of pine, but nowhere along the mile or so of shoreline, is there one bathing house. Surely this is an inconvenience to the number of people who go there to enjoy the pleasures of the beach. This is an oversight which should be remedied, because this area is capable of great development. Last year, numerous people came to Charlottetown for a vacation, found their way to Rocky Point and were amazed at the lack of facilities in such a beautiful spot. I may suggest that at a moderate cost, a bathing house could be erected, and this would be one step towards developing this district into an additional attraction for tourists. I am, Sir, etc. MRS. KEISLEY J. BURROUGHS, Charlottetown.

Hair For Halo Type Baldness

By Dr. Theodore R. Vandellen Two years ago, we reported good news for balding men: the successful transplant of a tuft of hair from the fringes on the scalp to the bald spot. The plugs taken from the hairy regions were grafted into the bald areas in much the same way as a lawn is sodded with a better grass than the original. In fact, other physicians have confirmed the efficacy of the technique by the nature of their results.

The bare spots are anesthetized and small 17-inch circular pieces of scalp are removed. The transplants show a tendency to fall out in 48 hours. The redistributed tufts usually fall out in 10 to 14 days. Regrowth can be expected within 8 to 10 weeks. Meanwhile, the hair on the scalp is shaved to cover the top of the scalp. In others, the fringe is rearranged so that it blends with the edge of a tuft.

Good cosmetic results are obtained when the patches are placed in the forehead and hair is styled in receding hairline. The patches can be inserted in the hair on the scalp to cover the top of the scalp. In others, the fringe is rearranged so that it blends with the edge of a tuft.

FRUITS AND BERING

It is difficult to see how the Bering Sea whaling industry could be expected to survive in the long run. The whaling industry has been in a state of decline for some time, and the Bering Sea whaling industry is no exception.

NO ROOM FOR RETREAT

There is a frightening narrative in the barnstorming tour through South Vietnam by United States Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Maxwell D. Taylor.

NO LEWAY

In this way the United States has made it virtually impossible to change its mind of course, but it is a change of mind. Equally, it cannot change its mind on Cuba, in the United States and in the United States.

NOTES BY THE WAY

They say women are smarter than men, but do you ever see a man wearing a shirt that is perped up the back? — W. J. Ivor Star.
The words "Iron Curtain" are beginning to be out of date as a description of the frontier between Western and Eastern Europe. Rather than a solid curtain, it is a wire mesh. In some places the mesh is a lot looser than in others—than in the former Soviet bloc. It is a lot looser than in others—than in the former Soviet bloc. It is a lot looser than in others—than in the former Soviet bloc.

U.N. Permanent Force?

The deadly struggle in Cyprus is seen in some British circles as a convincing argument for the establishment of a permanent United Nations peace force. For one thing, the British public has been forced to look on the Greek Cypriots as the aggressors in the Cyprus peace-keeping troops in Cyprus were defied and humiliated by the Greek Cypriots.

QUESTIONS REPENTANCE

The Liberal Guardian of Manchester, in a letter to the editor, never editorial, says repentance never allows forgotten sins. It is a good thing to be able to forget, but it is a good thing to be able to remember. It is a good thing to be able to forget, but it is a good thing to be able to remember.

No Room For Retreat

There is a frightening narrative in the barnstorming tour through South Vietnam by United States Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Maxwell D. Taylor. The United States would seem determined to paint itself into another corner. The purpose of the tour, which will take the trappings of a U.S. political campaign with its backslapping and its handshaking, is to dramatize to the Vietnamese the United States' support of Major-General Nguyen Khanh and his Government in their war against the Communist North.
