Amalgamation With Ch'town Seen No Man's Land Solution

BY RALPH CAMERON
Guardian - Patriot Staff Writer

Dr. R. Gordon Lea, chairman of the City School Board summed up the position of the City of Charlottetown yesterday towards the problem of education facing the residents of 'No Man's Land'.

"The area is part of the Charlottetown school district, but is not part of the city." He added that the minister of education had the authority to direct that children should attend school in specified districts.

However, a drawback existing is that the school board here has no taxing powers while at the same time Charlottetown can exercise no authority over the area involved.

AMOUNT TOO LOW

For the past several years the provincial government has been making a grant to the city to cover the education of children in the district affected, but this year announced it was discontinuing the grant. Children from outlying districts attnding school in the city now pay an annual fee of $70. But in this connection Dr. Lea stated the amount is too low as the cost of educating a child here runs to $100 per year.

The matter could be settled simply and reasonably quickly by residents of No Man's Land requesting the territory be included as part of the city proper, it has been pointed out by city officials. (In all probability arrangements could be made with the city similar to those under which amalgamation with Spring Park was effected whereby the assessments at that time were 'frozen' for four years.)

40 INVOLVED

It is believed that upwards of 40 children may be involved as more people have moved and are moving into the co-operative housing project on North River Road just beyond the city limits. These children could attend the nearby school at West Royalty. At least one family is facing the possibility of spending $500. to send their children to school in the city.

2-Year Suspended Sentence Given Little Sands Resident

Peter Oral Richards, Little Sands received a two-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty to incest before Magistrate James B. Johnston, QC. in Queen's County magistrate's court yesterday morning.

Councelled by John P. Nicholson the accused was ordered to enter into a recognizance in the amount of $2,000 and two sureties of $1,000.

DRIVER FINED $100

Appearing for sentence on the charge of driving while his abilities were impaired by alcohol, Gordon Stanley MacInnis, Charlottetown, was fined $100 and costs or 10 days in jail. Mr. Nicholson was defence counsel.

On a similar charge, Raymond Boswell MacCallum, Marshfield, was remanded until June 15, and Aeneas Ronald MacIntyre, Bedford, was remanded until June 1. In both cases, the extended remands were granted by consent of defence counsel Mr. Nicholson and crown counsel, Deputy Attorney-General J. Arthur McGuigan and Alan K. Scales.

Two Hunter River youths, Roger Lorne Bernard and David Roy Whitlock, pleaded guilty to charges of the theft of a pair of automobile fender skirts. They were given an adjournment until June 1 for sentence.

ANGLER IS CHARGED

On the charge of using more than one fishing line and rod while angling for trout, Charles Edward White, East Royalty, represented by Lester P. O'Donnell, was fined $10 and costs. In addition the magistrate made an order that the fishing equipment of the accused, which was seized by the RCMP may be returned to the accused after 30 days.

Of four persons charged with speeding, all from Charlottetown, Kwung Hon Yee and Anthony Peter Doiron, were each fined $15 and costs or five days in jail, and Francis Ernest Peters and Derek McQuarrie were each fined $10 and costs or five days.

A similar penalty was meted out to Joseph Louis Blacquiere, North Rustico, who pleaded guilty to overtaking and passing another vehicle when it was not clear to do so.

For having possession of intoxicating liquor not purchased from a vendor's store, Eldon Wallace Farris, Saint John, N. B., was fined $25 and costs or 30 days. Also under the Liquor Control Act, another accused was fined $20 and costs or 30 days for possession of intoxicating liquor in a place other than his residence.

Two accused pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place, and each was fined $20 and costs or 15 days.

Failure to stop at a "stop" sign resulted in another accused being fined $5 and costs or two days.

Remanded In Theft Case

Two young Charlottetown men yesterday morning were further remanded for sentencing on charges of theft until May 24 by Magistrate A. J. Haslam in city police court.

The remand was given the two men due to the absence of their counsel, Lester P. O'Donnell, who was a pallbearer at a funeral.

The two accused, James Garry Gormley and William D. Pilcher on Tuesday both pleaded guilty to the theft of live lobsters, valued at less than $50, the property of George Agnew.

Of four charged with being drunk and incapable, three pleaded guilty and were each sentenced to 20 days in Queens County jail. The fourth pleaded not guilty and was remanded without bail until May 24.

McGill University Plans Series Of Space Probes

By KEN SMITH

MONTREAL (CP)—Have you ever seen a small boy, armed with a slingshot, firing stones in the air just to see how high they will go?

That's something like what a group of dignified McGill University professors will be doing this summer — except that, being grown men, their equipment will be a bit more sophisticated and their aims somewhat more practical.

They will be paving the way for McGill to become a member of the Space Club—an exclusive organization hitherto reserved for governments, and only the richest ones at that.

The McGill group hopes, however, that by shooting projectiles into space from a giant, Second World War cannon they can lower the cost of each space shot to where comprehensive research by a private organization is feasible.

The university is reticent about talking costs, but spokesmen say it will be "fantastically low" compared with the present method of putting a small nose cone on top of a multi-million-dollar military rocket.

CANNON FROM U.S.

By next fall, the scientists expect to be sending vehicles 125 miles into space by firing them from their cannon. After that, they hope to send other vehicles into orbit around the earth or into deep space by installing a solid fuel rocket engine in the vehicle that would be ignited at the 125-mile level.

The gun the scientists will be using is a 16 - inch, 185 - ton monster obtained from the United States Army, one of several groups in the U.S. watching the experiment with great interest.

Ordinary gunpowder will be used to propel the vehicles on their way.

The shooting will be done from a site on the southeast coast of Barbados Island in the Caribbean. Hundreds of tons of reinforced concrete are being poured to prepare the emplacement to house the cannon.

Aside from the fun of firing something way, way up, McGill foresees its experimental rocketry station as providing an opportunity for detailed research on high-altitude problems, including composition of the upper atmosphere, meteorology, radiation and re-entry.

Such experimenting now is limited to hit-and-miss opportunities granted by the much more expensive rocket facilities.

The project, under the direction of Dean D. L. Mordell of McGill's engineering faculty, is the pet brainchild of Dr. Gerald V. Bull, a 34-year-old engineering professor who admits he is intrigued by "the highly imaginative fringe areas" of research.

He has been pushing the idea for more than seven years, but it was not until he joined the McGill staff last June that he received any solid encouragement and support.

A native of North Bay, Ont., who graduated from high school when he was only 14, Dr. Bull was snapped up by the government to work on guided missiles in 1950 after getting his doctorate in aerophysics at the University of Toronto.

In 1958, and 30 years old, he was supervising the aerophysics wing at the Canadian Armament Research and Development Establishment at Valcartier, Que.

The establishment had been working on missile development. Hampered by the lack of supersonic wind tunnel facilities in which they could try their ideas, scientists devised a method of shooting projectiles from guns.

They refined the technique to such a degree that they were able to fire missiles over their test range at speeds of up to 10,000 miles an hour. Models of the famous Bell X - 1 rocket plane were fired down the range.

Dr. Bull reasoned that if projectiles could be fired down a test range from a gun, there was no reason why they couldn't be shot into the air and, eventually, into space.

Using the gun to lift the projectile out of the drag of the dense lower air and beyond the heaviest pull of gravity, he decided, it should be possible to use a small, simple rocket engine to send it the rest of the way into space.

Dean Mordell says there is nothing very revolutionary in McGill's approach to space.

"Ballistically speaking, we're not doing anything that isn't 40 years old," he says. "It's a good old engineering principle that we're using in a new way."

Even Big Bertha, the famous gun used by Germany to shell Paris during the First World War, could have pushed a projectile 50 miles into the air, Dean Mordell says.

The initial expense of the project has been put up by McGill. Spokesmen admit they hope that, if the project succeeds, further funds will come from various interested parties, including governments.
