PRINCE OF WALES COLLEGE.

Exercises in the Opera House Last Evening.

Distribution of Medals and Diplomas—Interesting Addresses.

The commencement exercises of the Prince of Wales College took place in the Opera House last evening. The spacious edifice was well filled with ladies and gentlemen on the interesting occasion, and among those present were many who claim Old Prince of Wales as their Alma Mater.

Hon. Donald Farquharson presided, and with him on the stage were Judge Fitzgerald, A. B. Warburton, M. L. A., and Dr. Anderson. In the rear of these were the students and the Professors who are associated with Dr. Anderson on the teaching staff.

After some introductory remarks by Dr. Anderson, the College Glee Club came forward and rendered a chorus in a very creditable manner.

Then came the essays by Mr. Cyrus McMillan, and Miss Nellie Hodgson. "Oliver Goldsmith" was the subject of Mr. McMillan's essay, which was somewhat lengthy. In view of this fact only that portion of it relating to Goldsmith's birth, school days and earlier struggles for fame and fortune was dealt with. The essay was well written and was read in good voice. That portion of it with which the audience was favored was very interesting indeed. Miss Nellie Hodgson's essay which followed, was another clever composition. It was entitled "The Abencerage." The matter was most interesting, and it was read in a manner that was decidedly pleasing. Both addresses were deservedly applauded by the students and audience.

The Glee Club then favored the audience with another chorus, after which Mr. Willis, the valedictorian, came forward. In his interesting paper Mr. Willis referred to the many pleasant reflections that must centre around the events of the past year. But pleasure is seldom unalloyed with pain, and during the year a student who had endeared himself to all "went out in an untimely death," causing a pang of sadness and regret to fill the hearts of his College companions. All things considered he claimed that never before in the history of the College had the same amount of work been done as was performed last year. Much of this success was due to the teaching staff who displayed even more than their usual skill in developing the raw material entrusted to their care. The pleasure of having Professor Robertson at work again was keenly appreciated. Appropriate references were also made to the debating club and College Observer, and the College successes at hockey and football were also dealt with. In closing Mr. Willis spoke of the new College building, and gave Hon. Mr. Peters credit for the action he had taken in the matter. Before concluding he said a few words regarding the parting of the students, and expressed the hope that no matter where their lot would be cast they would do all in their power to keep insulated the fame of Old Prince of Wales.

At the conclusion of the valedictory, and before Mr. Willis left the stage, the College Glee Club sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Dr. Anderson, in reply to the valedictory, spoke in the highest terms of the work done by the students during the year, and expressed his appreciation of the splendid manner in which they had responded to the wishes of the teaching staff. The diplomas, he pointed out, had not been obtained without much hard work, and the students who received them were fully deserving. These diplomas were treated with the greatest respect wherever presented, and to use a financial expression they would be taken at "their face" anywhere. He sincerely hoped that no matter where the students would locate or what avocation they might pursue, they would always endeavour to keep unsullied the fame of Prince of Wales College; that they would never do anything that would be calculated to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of any person connected with that institution. Success has always attended Prince of Wales students in other seats of learning, and this year they have even been more successful than usual. Not only has the class work of these students been good but their conduct was excellent. He strongly urged those of the students who would engage in teaching to be thorough and diligent in their work, pointing out that it was largely through the painstaking efforts of the teacher that many a lad was sent to the College. Dr. Anderson then put in an able plea for higher education. Denmark, which was once the poorest country of its size in Europe, was now one of the richest, and all on account of the intellectual development of its people. To higher education in schools and colleges was attributed the success of that country in dairying, bacon-curing and other industries. Why should not Prince Edward Island succeed in these matters as well as Denmark? What higher education had done for Denmark it would surely do for this province. Higher education would cultivate the minds of the people and put them on the road to success. In conclusion he urged the students to work hard and honestly and success would assuredly attend their efforts.

"Three times three and a tiger" were then given for Dr. Anderson, after which came another chorus by the Glee Club. The presentation of medals and diplomas then took place, the honors being handed the successful students by Hon. Mr. Farquharson, who briefly addressed each. The names of the prize-winners and the medals won were given in yesterday's issue.

As each student came forward to receive his or her honor, witty sallies and improvised songs greeted them from one of the boxes where the Glee Club had taken up a position.

Before the presentation began Dr. Anderson read a letter from Dr. McPhail, of Montreal, who had promised a medal each year to the best student. In this letter the desire was expressed that this medal should be known as the "Anderson Medal" in recognition of the valuable services rendered the cause of education by the talented Principal of Prince of Wales College. Hence this medal will in future be known as the Anderson Medal.

Vice-Chancellor Fitzgerald then briefly addressed the students in the absence of Mr. Arthur Peters. He referred in opening to the valuable services rendered the cause of education by the brilliant Principal of Prince of Wales College. He thought it was eminently fitting that the medal presented by Dr. McPhail should be given the name of Anderson. Dr. Anderson had helped to form the character and mould the destiny of hundreds of our most successful people, and it was right that this should be recognized. He referred to the proposed new College, and expressed the opinion that if the new boys in the new building upheld the status of the old boys in the old building they would be doing well.

Another chorus by the Glee Club followed.

Hon. Mr. Farquharson then made a brief address. He congratulated the College and its teaching staff upon the splendid showing that had been made. In the matter of education he thought that Prince Edward Island compared very favorably with any other province. It was, he said, the ambition of the Government to give every boy and girl a good education, and almost half the revenue of the province went for this purpose. He urged the students when they entered upon the battle of life to always do what was right and honorable. There was a great deal besides education in the battle of life. He would advise the young men to keep out of towns unless they had to come in. He also advised the boys to take up mechanical pursuits in preference to the professions which were overcrowded, and in conclusion paid a deserved tribute to the services rendered the country in educational matters by Dr. Anderson.

Cheers were then given for the Vice-Chancellor and Hon. Mr. Farquharson; and the Glee Club rendered Schneider's Band.

Before dispersing Dr. Anderson tendered the thanks of all concerned to Mr. Hedley McKinnon, who presided at the piano, and to those painstaking efforts during the past three weeks the success of the musical portion of the proceedings was due.

Cheers for Mr. McKinnon and the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close. The entertainment was very enjoyable throughout, and the large audience seemed well pleased.
