

What Time Is It? Time to do well— Time to live better— Give up that grudge— Answer that letter— Speak that kind word, to sweeten a sorrow; Do that good deed you would leave till to-morrow.

Time to try hard In that new situation— Time to build on A solid foundation, Giving up needlessly changing and drifting; Leaving the quicksands that ever are shifting.

What time is it? Time to be thrifty; Farmers, take warning— Plough in the springtime— Sow in the morning— Spring rain is coming, zephyrs are blowing; Heaven will attend to the quickening and growing.

Time to count costs— Lessen expenses— Time to look well To the gates and the fences; Making and mending as good workers should, Shutting out evil and keeping the good.

What time is it? Time to be earnest, Laying up treasure; Time to be thoughtful, Choosing true pleasures; Loving stern justice—of truth being fond; Making your word just as good as your bond.

Time to be happy, Doing your best— Time to be trustful, Leaving the rest, Knowing in whatever country or clime, Ne'er can we call back one minute of time.

The Horse that Everybody Wants. In selecting breeding stock we do not urge our friends to place a lower estimate on the value of speed, but to place a higher estimate on the other qualifications that go to make up the horse that everybody wants.

Intelligent and persistent efforts are making all over the country to fix and develop and improve the trotting habit of action, and these efforts have been attended with very marked success ever since breeders grasped the primal truth that to get a trotter they must go to a trotter and not to a runner. But there is a lack of balance in this progress that indicates neither permanence nor profit.

We are building up a breed from composite material, and, while we are fixing and developing one qualification, we should be fixing and developing the others pari passu. It requires just as much intelligence, just as nice a discrimination, and just as many generations to fix and develop the qualifications of size and beauty and good sense and good morals, as to fix and develop the qualifications of speed.

To be successful, breeders must free themselves from the crochets of a single qualification, and grasp all the qualifications essential to a perfect horse, and carry them forward together. This is the only way to realize a profit on every animal bred, and the certainty of this profit elevates the pursuit far above the mere chances of a lottery. That a few animals of phenomenal speed and greatly lacking in most of the other desirable qualifications bring great prices every year, is a constant temptation to breed only for speed.

But if we look behind the curtain and see the multitude of failures, and estimate the cost of producing them, to say nothing of the money thrown away in trying to make them fast, we will be content with the higher average price which less crotchety methods will secure.

In the minds of some there may be a doubt as to the practicability of successfully breeding for all the qualifications we have enumerated. In reply to this, we will say it is altogether practicable for every man to shape his course in the right direction. If there two horses of equally well defined inheritances of speed and equal individual ability, he can select the one that comes the nearer to the ideal horse in size, color, beauty, and disposition. Something of superior speed, even in a little runt, should be rejected in favor of a horse of more commanding presence.

The aims and objects of the breeder of trotters are very different from the aims and objects of the breeder of runners. As soon as the racing qualities of the latter are exhausted, the greater portion of them are sold for the purposes of common drudgery, and at common drudge prices. At four or five years old they are dismissed from the turf, and that is the last we know of them. The breeder of trotters seeks to produce horses that are good for everything, except running, and that will remain good and serviceable till they are twenty years old. He seeks to suit the road, the track, the park, and family, and the farm. In short, he seeks to produce horses that will fill all the places where horses are needed in our industrial pursuits and domestic necessities and enjoyment. To meet the demands of this wide field he will succeed best who produces the horse that everybody wants—Wallace's Monthly.
