

Canada Said Not Recovered From Bank Issue

WASHINGTON (CP)—A Canadian economist, testifying before a congressional banking subcommittee, said Tuesday that Canada has not yet recovered from the "arbitrary" controversy between the Bank of Canada and the Canadian government during 1961-62.

Professor H. Scott Gordon of Ottawa's Carleton University told the subcommittee on domestic affairs that Canadians "have not yet resolved, by appropriate statutory changes, the formal weaknesses in our central banking legislation that permitted those unfortunate events to occur."

Referring to the events that led to the departure of James Coyne from the bank governorship when the Progressive Conservative government was in power, Gordon said:

"The events preceding the attempted dismissal of the governor of the Bank of Canada in 1961 showed that central bank independence can degenerate in irresponsibility, and that the government itself can make use of the autonomous position of the central bank to deny its own responsibility for what it conceals or to politically manipulate policies."

He suggested that the Bank of Canada and the U.S. Federal Reserve Board should be recognized as ordinary government departments.

"In Canada, the full integration of the central bank into the executive branch of government is demanded both by the requirements of good economic policy and by basic constitutional theory. In the U.S., it would seem not only that economic argument is fully applicable, though that alone is a very strong one in the light of the important role we expect monetary management to play in the modern economic world."

Police Blamed In Escape Of Gang Suspects

MONTREAL (CP)—A Quebec Provincial Police investigation into last Thursday's break from Montreal Court House cells by six suspected members of a hooded roband-ramp gang has found four policemen guilty of negligence.

Four of the suspects were captured in the first hours of a chase involving police dogs. Two more, Jean-Claude Messier, 26, and Antonio Paschino, 27, are still at large.

The police investigation, conducted by Chief Inspector Paul Desreux, says four provincial policemen did not follow certain regulations and recommended that disciplinary action be taken against them.

"We reached the conclusion after a detailed inquiry that the escape would not have been possible if the regulations had been followed," he said in an interview.

The report is to be studied by the Quebec attorney-general's department for possible action on the recommendations.
