—MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—(CP) Even canaries over-indulge at the dinner table, says Charles A. James, a bird doctor.

—Indigestion is one of the chief causes of illness among the feathered friends, who are subject to as many ailments as humans, according to Mr. James, who has been treating birds for the last 37 years.

—"The sign of illness that humans don't get is the "ball of feathers," said the doctor, describing some of the operations performed in his hospital here. The illness is caused by the bird eating feathers while cleaning themselves. A ball of feathers forms in the intestines and a surgical operation becomes necessary.

—The operations are similar to those performed on human beings. An anaesthetic is administered generally with a small cloth used as a mask. When the mask is removed, the bird recovers immediately— and without ill effects.

As for topcoats, double-breasted Chesterfields will be popular for dressy occasions, but single-breasted topcoats in brown and grey tweeds, many with an interwoven herringbone design and loose-fitting shoulders, will dominate and help carry the feeling.

TWEED TOPCOATS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—This fall men will change into clothes that are merely a continuation of summer comfort and ease. Having had months of comfort from their washable suits, sport coats and tropical-weight suits, they demanded more of the same in their fall clothes—and they're getting it, in soft tweeds, shetlands and medium-weight flannels. To say nothing of the super-comfort built into worsted business suits.

Though nearly every year contributes some particular fad, like those seasons when a wave of fancy backs inundated men's jackets, or the bell-bottomed trousers atrociously marked the landscape, this year will be remarkably free of such fanciful fancies.

Suits will be considerably more standardized in type and in place of the "business man number" and the "college boy model," you'll see a leveling out of differences in "style." Single-breasted, because of the rougher materials to be worn, will move back into the men's clothing picture and will have three and four buttons with patch pockets. Collegians are now buttoning the two top buttons, a style imported from England. Double-breasted models will, however, continue to have their thousands of fans.

HAIR ORNAMENTS COME INGENUOUS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(CP)—There's lots of news in hair ornaments this season. And lots of news in how they're worn. Take that little matter of tuck combs. Tuck combs were originally designed to keep hair in place. Ingenious women, however, began adorning them with all sorts of things. Presto! The tuck comb passed from purely utilitarian item to an ornament.

One smart young woman shellacked lima and kidney beans and seed corn and sewed them to a band of hemp which she in turn sewed to the top of the comb. Another punctured tiny sea shells and fastened them to a piece of white binding tape which she tied around her head to keep the wind from blowing her coiffure every which-way.

Keep Minard's in the home.

As for topcoats, double-breasted Chesterfields will be popular for dressy occasions, but single-breasted topcoats in brown and grey tweeds, many with an interwoven herringbone design and loose-fitting shoulders, will dominate and help carry the feeling.

HOKEY LEAGUE TO CONTINUE

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—(CP)—Meeting while the Canadian Parliament is in a war-time session, the management committee of the National Hockey League laid plans today to continue operations this winter.

"For the present, we must plan to go ahead just like any other business," said the league president, Frank Calder, after the closed session. "But this meeting hasn't the final say. That will be up to the semi-annual meeting of the board of governors at Detroit Sept. 20."

SPEDDY COPPER

LONDON.—(CP)—Police Constable Davies is a threat to cycling records. During a court case here he claimed he had ridden an ordinary bicycle at 50 miles an hour. The world cycling record is 70 miles, 504 yards, in one hour.

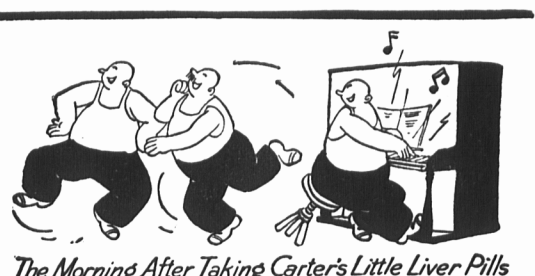

Monday the holiday with friends in Emerald.

Mr. Daniel Whitlock and Mr. William Lawson who are in training in Charlottetown, enjoyed Tuesday evening at their respective homes in Kensington.

Mr. Hymie Kasabetsky and Mr. Allison Bernard were business visitors to Charlottetown on Tuesday.

Miss Mary Ready R. N. of Halifax, N. S., is enjoying her annual holidays with her brother and sister in Kensington.

Mr. Ben Chambliss was a visitor to Summerside.—H.

Schools In Air More On Wheels Modern Feature

RADIO, MAILS AND RAILWAY CAR AIDS TO EDUCATION OF CANADIAN CHILDREN AS FALL TERM OPENS.

Pioneer teachers who ruled in Canada's early schools would open their eyes with astonishment at modern versions of the little red schoolhouse across the Dominion through Post Office facilities.

Gaskatchewan has an extensive correspondence course system with students in remote sections of the province getting their education through Post Office facilities.

Children in far off lands get their education through Ontario's correspondence course, Ontario mission-ary families are enrolled among the pupils of the department in Northern Ontario, the schools are on wheels. The railway school car service carries education to scores of small communities along the railway lines.

Where Radio Helps

A survey by the Canadian Press showed Nova Scotia with the record for the greatest use of the radio among Canadian provinces with Gaskatchewan second. For more than a decade, Nova Scotia's department of education has put out a general program to schools on selected subjects.

All radio-equipped schools tune in to these sons. When the school is not radio-equipped, the students go to homes with radios and get school attendance credits.

Regina and Moose Jaw for years taught music to their students through radio programs. Hundreds of others listened in and got lessons in musical appreciation.

Varied Education

Schools were once simple places where reading, writing and arithmetic constituted the bulk of the curriculum. Today's schools are amazingly varied. Technical education has spread rapidly, as schools sought to train pupils to face the exigencies of modern living.

Some schools have specialized problems. About 280 attend the School for the Deaf at Belleville, Ont., and about 150, from Ontario, Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan attend the School for the Blind at Brantford, Ont.
