Arrow Rejected By U.S., Defence Minister Reports

PARIS (Reuters) — Canada's Defence Minister Pearkes said Monday the United States has definitely rejected Canada's Avro Arrow twin-engine supersonic CP-105 fighter.

He told reporters he had talks in Paris with U.S. Defence Secretary Neil McElroy, who informed him of the American final answer.

"I have had no success in attempting to interest the Americans in the purchase of the 105—that is final and definite," Pearkes added.

He had suggested to McElroy that modifications might be made to the plane to include the American proven fire control and missile system and thus reduce cost.

But the Americans were still not interested. The Canadian government would take a decision regarding the future of the 105 by March 1.

Pearkes also said he had discussed the possibility of European NATO countries being interested in the aircraft, but none—not even Britain—had the required semi-automatic ground environment (SAGE) system, which obtains information from radar and automatic processes and passes it to ground control towers and aircraft in flight.

Pearkes said there would be an honest attempt in the NATO ministerial council session to meet the minimum military requirements of Gen. Lauris Norstad, supreme allied commander in Europe, and that Canada has made every effort successfully to meet her commitments.

Pearkes said he visited the Canadian Brigade in Europe a few days ago and found the men "ready for any emergency which may arise."

"The Canadian troops are right up to strength. They are all seasoned soldiers with many years service—well equipped, physically fit and well commanded. They know the role expected of them and are confident in carrying it out."

Pearkes also said there was full co-operation in the European and North American air warning system.

Cold Weather Causes S' Side Building Projects Curtailed

SUMMERSIDE—Unusually cold weather that past two weeks has curtailed much construction here and dealt a blow to the unusually good employment situation in the Summerside area.

Several major projects were forced to abandon construction temporarily or shut down until spring by the severe cold which has driven frost some two feet into the ground.

Work on the new motel being erected by Charles Linkletter has been shut down until spring or until continued mild weather makes it possible to resume operations. Between 15 and 20 men were employed on this project.

The weather has forced curtailment of some work at the Hillcrest Housing development. M.F. Schurman Co. Ltd., has had to cut back its working force by 15 to 20 men. However, Schurman's has 26 carpenters and 14 laborers still working on this job.

Hoffa Critic Fired From Job

NEW YORK (AP)—Thomas L. Hickey, long an outspoken opponent of Teamster President James R. Hoffa, has been removed as general organizer of the labor union.

His successor is John O'Rourke, president of the New York joint council of Teamsters and a strong Hoffa supporter.

The action was taken by the union's executive board in Miami Beach, Fla., Saturday.

No reason was given for the change. Hickey told a Senate investigating committee in August, 1957 that Hoffa forces were then moving to throttle his union career.

Hickey was one of three candidates who unsuccessfully ran against Hoffa for presidency of the union to succeed David Beck

Is Optimistic Over Possible Railway Merger

BOSTON (AP)—Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the Boston and Maine Railroad, said Monday he is optimistic over a possible merger of New England railroads and the Boston and Albany division of the New York Central.

In an interview with a reporter for Dow Jones, financial reporting service, McGinnis said after noting that the presidents of the five New England railroads are to meet in New York Thursday.

"This is a sincere effort to merge the carriers and I think there is an excellent chance of it coming about if the other railroads are really interested. I don't agree with cynics that it takes four or five years to merge and consolidate railroads. I see no reason why it couldn't be effected in 1961."

The five New England railroads are the Boston and Maine, New Haven, Maine Central, Bangor and Aroostook and the Rutland.

A merger, McGinnis said, would give better service to shippers.
