

Remembrance Day

NOVEMBER 11, 1956

We bow in memory to those who fell
Upon the beaches and the burning sands,
And those who lie in slimy ocean wrecks
Or sleep in lonely graves in foreign lands.

They did not shirk with trivial excuse
Nor did they waver when the test arrived.
They took the burden with the zeal of youth
And, going grimly into action, died.

Who knows, among the legions that are gone,
Unknown to fame among that gallant throng
Were men who might, had they but lived their span,
Have shown where our diplomacy is wrong.

The past is gone, the future lies ahead,
The errors of the past we must correct.
In apathy there lies prospective doom,
Accelerated by our own neglect.

So to the end we must not fear nor fail,
Our gratitude to them must never cease.
May God be merciful to those who died
That we survivors might live on in peace.
