CHAPTER XV.

OUR scene now changes from the wild ocean and its perils to a snug room in Fenchurch Street, the inner office of Wardlaw & Son—a large apartment, panelled with fine old mellow Spanish oak, and all the furniture in keeping; the carpet, a thick Axminster of sober colors; the chairs of oak and morocco, very substantial; a large office table, with oaken legs like very columns, substantial; two Milner safes; a globe of unusual size, with a handsome tent over it, made of roan leather, figured; the walls hung with long oak boxes, about eight inches broad, containing rolled maps of high quality and great dimensions; to consult which, oaken sceptres tipped with brass hooks, stood ready; with these the great maps could be drawn down and inspected, and on being released flew up into their wooden boxes again. Besides these were hung up a few drawings, representing outlines and inner sections of vessels, and on a smaller table lay models, almanacs, etc. The great office-table was covered with writing materials and papers, all but a square space enclosed with a little silver rail, and inside that space lay a purple morocco case about ten inches square; it was locked, and contained an excellent portrait of Helen Rolleston.

The apartment was so situated, and the frames of the plate-glass windows so well made and substantial, that, let a storm blow a thousand ships ashore, it could not be felt, nor heard, in Wardlaw's inner office.

But appearances are deceitful; and who can wall out a sea of troubles, and the tempests of the mind?

The inmate of that office was battling for his commercial existence, under accounting difficulties and dangers. Like those who sailed the "Proserpine's" long-boat, upon that dirty night, which so nearly swamped her, his eyes had now to be on every wave, and the sheet forever in his hand.

His measures had been ably taken; but, as will happen when clever men are driven into a corner; he had backed events rather too freely against time; had allowed too slight a margin for unforeseen delays. For instance, he had averaged the "Shannon's" previous performances, and had calculated on her arrival too nicely. She was a fortnight overdue, and that delay brought peril.

He had also counted upon getting news of the "Proserpine." But not a word had reached Lloyd's as yet.

At this very crisis came the panic of '66.
Overeend and Gurney broke; and Ward-law's experience led him to fear that, sooner or later, there would be a run on every bank in London. Now he had borrowed £80,000 at one bank, and £25,000 at another; and, without his ships, could not possibly pay a quarter of the money.
If the banks in question were run upon, and obliged to call in all their resources, his credit must go; and this, in his precarious position, was ruin.

He had concealed his whole condition from his father, by false book-keeping.
Indeed, he had only two confidants in the world; poor old Michael Penfold, and Helen Rolleston's portrait; and even to those two he made half confidences. He dared not tell either of them all he had done, and all he was going to do.

His redeeming feature was as bright as ever. He still loved Helen Rolleston with a chaste, constant, and ardent affection that did him honor. He loved money too well; but he loved Helen better. In all his troubles and worries, it was his own consolation to unlock her portrait, and gaze on it, and purify his soul for a few minutes.
Sometimes he would apologize to it for an act of doubtful morality. "How can I risk the loss of you? what is his favorite excuse. No: he must have credit. He must have money. She must not suffer by his past impudences. They must be repaired at any cost—for her sake.

It was ten o'clock in the morning; Mr.
Penfold was sorting his letters for his employer, when a buxom young woman rushed into the outer office, crying, "Oh, Mr. Penfold! and sank into a chair, breathless."

"Dear heart! what is the matter now?" said the old gentleman.

"I have had a dream, sir! I dreamed I saw Joe Wylie out on the seas, in a boat; and the wind it was a blowing, and the sea a roaring to that degree as Joe looked at me, and says he, 'Pray for me, Nancy Rouse.' So, I says, 'Oh, dear, Joe! what is the matter, and wha. ever is become of the "Proserpine"?'

"Gone to hell!" says he; which he knows I object to foul language. 'Gone—there—' says he, and I am smiling in her wake.
Oh, pray for me, Nancy Rouse.' With that I tries to pray in my dream, and screams instead, and wakes myself. Oh, Mr. Penfold! do tell me, have you got any news of the "Proserpine" this morning?"

"What is that to you?" inquired Arthur Wardlaw, who had entered just in time to hear this last query.

"What is it to me?" cried Nancy, firing up; "it is more to me, perhaps, than it is to you, for that matter."

Penfold explained, timidly:
"Sir, Mrs. Rouse is my landlady."

"Which I have never been to church with any man of the name of Rouse, least-ways, not in my waking hours," edged in the lady.

"Miss Rouse, I should say," said Penfold apologizing. "I beg pardon, but I thought Mrs. might sound better in a landlady." Please, sir, Mr. Wylie, the mate of the "Proserpine," is her—her sweetheart."

"Not he. Leastways, he is only on trail after a manner."

"Of course, sir—only after a manner," added Penfold, sadly perplexed. "Miss Rouse is incapable of anything else. But, if you please m'm, I don't presume to know the exact relation; and then with great reserve, 'but you know you are anxious about him.'

Miss Rouse sniffed, and threw her nose in the air—as if to throw a doubt even on that view of the matter.

"Well, ma'am," says Wardlaw, "I am sorry to say I can give you no information, I share your anxiety, for I have got £160, 000 of gold in the ship. You might inquire at Lloyd's. Direct her there, Mr. Penfold, and bring me my letters."

With this he entered his inner office, sat down, took out a golden key, opened the portrait of Helen, gazed at it, uttered a deep sigh, and prepared to face the troubles of the day.

Penfold brought in a leathern case like an enormous bill-book; it had thirty vertical compartments; and the names of various cities and sea-ports with which Wardlaw & Son did business, were printed in gold letters on some of these compartments; on others, the names of persons; and on two compartments, the word "Miscellaneous." Michael brought this machine in; filled with enough correspondence to break a man's heart to look at.
