Dorothy Dix Says

reflection upon her charms and virtues. Men are notoriously poor pickers. Many of the women that Nature designed to make the best wives never get the opportunity to be wives at all. Or it may be that a woman has never married because she has never found the man who came up to her idea and she would rather have no husband at all than a second-rate.

Many women of 35 are single because they sacrificed their youth to their families and gave the years when they were most attractive to men to supporting their parents and educating younger brothers and sisters. Others were so busy getting an education, or fitting themselves into a job, or pursuing a career that they had no time for romance and they let 35, which is almost the deadline in marriage for a woman, creep upon them unawares.

The advantage that a man has in marrying a woman of 35 is that he knows what he is getting in a wife, as he cannot possibly know when he marries a young girl. He can judge her as she is and her likelihood of suiting him without gambling on possible future developments. She is intelligent or dumb, sweet or sour, interesting or a bore. She is domestic or otherwise. A man pays his money and takes his choice. He doesn't buy a pig in a poke.

HAS ACQUIRED TACT

Also, by the time a woman is 35 she has acquired tact and diplomacy in dealing with people. She has learned to adapt herself to others. She is fairer, juster, more liberal in her views and less exacting of her husband, if she marries, than a young girl. And, above all else, if a woman marries at 35, it is because she is crazy to marry and have a husband and home and children, and she is so eternally grateful to the man who saves her from a lonely old age that she spoils him to death.

The disadvantages of marrying a woman of 35 are that, in many cases, she is so wedded to the family she has devoted her life to that she never divorces herself from them. Her husband always runs a bad second to Mamma and Papa, sisters and brothers, hordes of nieces and nephews. If she has been successful in business or a career, she is almost always bored to death with domesticity and pines for the excitement of the outer world.

Having worked side by side with men for twenty years, she knows them through and through and is a poor incense burner. Having had her own pocketbook and been free to go and come as she pleased, she won't stand for being bossed, or having to account for every penny of the household money. And she also, like the male bachelor, has acquired "ways". But, taking her all in all, the woman of 35 is a mighty good matrimonial bet. Especially for a widower.
