

Father and Son. I must look to the sheep in the fold, See the cattle are fed and warm; So Jack, tell mother to wrap you well, You may go with me over the farm, Though the snow is deep and the weather is cold, You are not a baby at six years old.

Two feet of snow on the hill-side lay, But the sky was as blue as June; And father and son came laughing home When dinner was ready at noon— Knocking the snow from their weary feet, Rosy and hungry and longing to eat.

"The snow was so deep," the farmer said, "That I feared I should scarce get through, The mother turned with a pleasant smile: "Then what could a little lad do?" "I trod in my father's steps," said Jack; "Wherever he went I kept his track."

The mother looked in the father's face, And a solemn thought was there; The words had gone like a lightning flash To the seat of a nobler care; "If he tread in my steps," then day by day How carefully I must choose my way.

"For the child will do as the father does, And the track that I leave behind, If it be firm, and clear, and straight, The feet of my son will find, He will tread in his father's steps, and say: I am right, for this was my father's way.

Oh! fathers! leading in life's hard road, Be sure of the steps you take: The sons you love, when grey-haired men, Will tread in them still for your sake, When grey-haired men to their sons will say: "We tread in our father's steps to-day,"

A New Art.

For several years past, says Engineering, a noted scientist has been engaged in studying the movement of colored particles within marble, ivory and other dense substances, and the result is a process of developing paintings and designs below the surface of marble, thereby combining the two arts of sculpture. Through the use of metallic oxides, worked in a special medium and fixed by a special treatment, designs in every shade and tint are produced within the stone. It is a peculiarity of the method that every hue penetrates at right angles to the surface, without spreading laterally. The process will be applicable to statuary, pottery and mural tablets of all kinds, as well as architectural decoration.

They Wanted Rest.

"I must have some rest this summer," said the clock; "I am all run down." "I think I need a country seat," said the easy chair, leaning on his elbow. "I am getting played out," said the piano; "a little fresh air would be a good thing for me." "That's what I want," said the sofa; "a little fresh air at the springs." "I should like to go with the sofa, and lounge in the woods," said the foot-stool. "If my legs were stronger," said the table, "I should go to the country for some leaves." "Country board is always so plain," growled the sideboard; "nobody that is nobby or polished goes there." "Let me reflect," said the mirror; "they have very plain-looking lassies there, too; do they not?" "You make me plump," said the divan; and here the housemaid closed the folding-door and shut them all up.

Benedict Arnold's Hiding Place.

An interesting discovery was made by Thomas Alling, a few days ago at the old Benedict Arnold house, in Water street, New Haven, Conn. In taking out a portion of the garret floor he found a vault, which is supposed to have been used by Arnold during the war of the Revolution as a hiding place for suspects or fugitive, whom he wished to befriend. The lifting of some of the garret floor planking revealed the pocket or vault underneath. It is about 4 1/2 feet deep, and 6 feet square, and is plastered on the sides. Two or more persons could remain in concealment there without being crowded. The vault is located by the side of the large old-fashioned chimney. On the floor adjacent to the vault formerly stood a large bookcase, and it is supposed that through this entrance was obtained to the hiding place. Inside the vault is plain evidence of a former staircase extending to a small enclosed space on another side of the chimney. This place, which is now plastered up, is supposed to have been a sort of a closet. Whether Arnold used the vault for secreting Tories or the patriots, or built it to afford a retreat for himself, no one knows. That it should have remained undiscovered until Mr. Alling accidentally found it shows that it was well designed for the purpose which led to its construction.—Boston Herald.
