Panel On Crime Prevention Agrees Improvement Needed

By PAUL GRESOUE
 Canadian Press Staff Writer
WASAGAMING, Man., (CP)—Three authorities on criminal behavior agreed Friday that Canada has no reason to be complacent about its program of crime prevention and rehabilitation. Participating in a panel discussion at the annual meeting of the National Council of Women of Canada were Ivor Halliday, chief probation officer for Manitoba; Dr. Gordon Stephens, psychiatrist at Manitoba's Stony Mountain Penitentiary, and Kenneth G. Howard, executive secretary of the John Howard-Elizabeth Fry Society of Manitoba.

Mr. Howard said: "There is room for considerable thought for what we are to do now. We must get away from deterrents and the emphasis must be placed on treatment and rehabilitation." He mentioned the need for an extended probation program and a parole supervision program that allows prisoners to spend part of their sentences in the community.

NEED MORE STUDY
 Mr. Halliday said the National Council of Women should encourage federal and local governments to give more study to crime prevention.

He said Manitoba had 93 per cent success with its probation program but the province was not placing all the prisoners it should on probation.

Dr. Stephens told delegates that all forward steps in the last 12 years resulted from belated implementation of a 1936 government report on penal reform. About 800 new positions in federal penitentiaries had been granted since implementation of the report started but all the work these people did could be completely negated by a staff that had a negative attitude to "newfangled" ideas or had hostility within its ranks. Advances made during the last decade included, in order of importance, better staff selection, penitentiary staff college training at Kingston, Ont., improved inmate care and group therapy sessions.

"But I don't want to present a false or rosy picture," he said. "We have to be on the lookout for early signs of deviation to prevent crime."

Cursing Study Is Presented
SASKATOON (CP)—A study on Canadian cursing, outlining the basic vocabulary in French and English, was presented to the Canadian Linguistic Association Friday.

Dr. J. S. Tassie, chairman of the French department at Carleton University in Ottawa, addressed the association, meeting here during the Conference of Learned Societies.

"Among the phenomena that characterize a people, none is more revealing than the way swears," Dr. Tassie said. Swearing, says Dr. Tassie, is a release for strong emotions.

VERBAL EXPLOSION
 An individual was constrained to obey the code of his society, but occasionally he burst his bonds. The verbal explosion was a release which prevented a physical explosion.

Sometimes, conceded Dr. Tassie, this safety valve is not enough and the individual assaults the object of his anger, swearing at the same time as a kind of musical accompaniment.
