ELLEN'S DIARY

A Sow Gave Birth To Her First Litter Of 10

"To lose one, or more — that's what cuts down the profit. And on farms there is never too much margin to play with," James commented this morning, looking down on a piglet. It is the last-born of the lot as it happened, and evidently one, as he himself will say, "Not born to live".... The cows, his special care, having summered pleasantly and well in the sun and shade of the orchard, with access also to their troughs in the piggery, are comely animals, and now one had given birth to the first of autumn's increase, a little of ten.

"It's a good litter" we whispered, looking in on them in the straw bed, where in a pink and white picture, at the moment all was at-peace. "It is, if things remain as they are," James said softly. "But" he smiled, "it's nice to have an extra one or two to come and go on."

Nature occasioned a sudden stirring. The piglets became alert. The mother crooned her nursing notes. There was a movement, each one, more or less pushing its way to its own feeding station. There came a concerted sound of sucking. James smiled, nodded.

"She's a good mother" he offered. "Her dam was the same. So was her grandmother, and her great-grand. We kept her for years." There was a silence. One piglet satisfied, fell into a doze. Another and another followed suit, until all were content.

"Do you remember that first one, Ellen? I got her one morning from a chap on the market square — brought her home in the first car we had. I do miss that spot. And the old market-house. That was a place where farmers could meet to 'talk shop'."

Lightly overcast this day was. Pleasantly warm.

"The weather keeps dry... dry" a visiting farmer today observed soberly. "It's good for getting on with the washing" Peter said. "Oh dear" James yawns. "I don't know what makes me so sleepy tonight. Ellen. It wasn't that we got so much done today. No harvesting... and another day gone."

Bride-To-Be Honored By Community

Mrs. Leslie Trainor, Emerald, was hostess recently for a community shower for Shirley Green in honor of her approaching marriage to Mr. Leo Murphy of Charlottetown.

The living room was decorated with pink and white streamers, bells and balloons. To the strains of the "Wedding March", the bride was escorted to the seat of honor by Mrs. Francis Croken.

The baskets were carried in many times by little Peggy and Pauline Howard. Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. St. Clair Trainor opened the many useful gifts, and Helen Rowe read the accompanying good wishes. The gifts were arranged on the table by Mary Trainor and Nancy Green.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the community, and the remainder of the evening passed pleasantly with music and dancing.

"Well, you and I had better
