The Robbery Case

Preliminary Examination.

THURSDAY Oct. 12.
THOMAS FLYNN, (sworn)—I am the City Marshal. The case was given to me to work up the morning after the robbery. I examined the premises in the presence of Mr. Aitken, Mr. Albert Carvell, and Mr. Rattenbury. I told Messervey to go to Dawson's on the morning of the Wednesday following. I made enquiries on the Saturday following, and found that some business had been transacted by Blatch and E. W. Dawson. I reported this the same evening to Mr. Aitken and Mr. Albert Carvell. On Friday afternoon the day after the robbery, I was told by Mr. Aitken that suspicion rested upon the prisoner. I had the first conversation with Messervey in reference to this money on the Friday following the robbery. Up to that time I had dealt only with the principals of the firm. Messervey told me what the note consisted of. At this time, I spoke of sending some one to Dawson's to see if any greenbacks had been paid to him by Blatch. I said that I should like to get somebody to go. At that time I did not care to send him, nor did I ask him to go. I did not know that he could identify the money at the time. On Wednesday I saw Messervey again, and I asked him if he could identify any of the money which he received that night. He told me that he thought he could. He spoke of a $20 Toronto Bank Note, but was not sure that he could identify this. He also said that there was a $20 Greenback which he knew. He told me the note was pale on the face of it, and had some marks on it made with an indelible pencil. That was the only description which he gave, but he said he could identify the note. This was the first time I pointedly asked him if he could identify the money. I told him that he had better go himself to Dawson's to see if he could get some Greenbacks from him. I never saw the note until I saw it in Court. I got a warrant and a search-warrant, and served them on Saturday last. I saw Blatch in his office, and there arrested him. I searched him, and found nothing.
(Cross examined by Mr. Davies.) The news of his arrest, and his arrest were simultaneous. He had no time to make away with anything from his person, to remove anything from the office, or to communicate with home. He was searched by officer Cameron, in my presence. I made a thorough examination of the County Court office. I searched every place where I thought anything might be concealed. Officer Cameron and myself searched his house, and every part of his premises. We found nothing. His wife was sick and weak; there was a baby there and a nurse, Mrs. Stewart. I made an examination of Carvell's premises the morning after the robbery. I saw the box of pipes referred to with footmarks on it. These nails, now produced by me, are exactly as I received them. I got them from Jed Carvell. He gave me these two nails and a piece of a shingle nail which I threw away. There is no marks upon them except the private marks I put upon them. On Friday when I went down to Carvell's office, I believe all the employees were there, including Messervey. Ritchie was not there that day. I was there two or three times that day. I am certain Messervey saw me there during the day, and was there sometimes when I visited the office. When I communicated with Mr. Aitken about the clue he would send for some one, or all the clerks—Messervey among them—and ask them questions in my presence. I did not usually ask Messervey, or any other clerk, questions regarding the robbery until Tuesday morning. Not before Wednesday was I informed by Messervey that there were marks on the note. Messervey told me so, after I had asked him the question. On Tuesday he told me that he had received a lot of greenbacks, and one of these was marked. He laid particular stress on the $20 greenback, and said he could identify it. He did not tell me how many marks he saw on the note.

Re-examined by Mr. McLeod—Some conversations were private and confidential with Mr. Aitken; but when I spoke to him in the office Mr. Albert Carvell was always there, but not always the clerks. From clues found out I was ready to act in the matter the middle of the week following the robbery. The questions asked of the clerks were relative to the clues of the robbery.
FREDERICK PARKER CARVELL (sworn)—I was in the office on the day of the robbery. I left the evening previous between 7 and 8 o'clock. I saw Blatch in the office the day before the robbery between 3 and 4 o'clock. I was in Messervey's office when Blatch came in. He passed the desk and I called out, "Hallo! Harry, what are you looking for?" He did not answer me, and I then said, "What's the matter?" He did not answer me the second time, so I got up and went out from behind the desk. By this time he had gone over towards the cellar hatch. I went and asked him what he was looking for, as he appeared to be looking for something. He asked me if I had seen his can. I said, "No." He then took a step or two towards the front of the shop, going back about half way, looking among the goods for his can. After looking for a little while, not more than a minute, he came back again towards the cellar hatch, and said "I think it must be in the cellar." He then went down into the cellar. I stood with one foot on the top of the step and one on the floor. He was going down the steps when I got into this position. He was not in the cellar more than a minute, and he came up from the direction of the hatch. He had the can in his hand, and said here is the can, I have found it, or words to that effect. He then spoke to Mr. Rattenbury, and I went with him to get some oil which he got. I lost sight of him when he was in the cellar, and when I saw him again he was coming from the direction of the outside hatch.

know this hatch is fastened and he was long enough out of my sight to pull out the fastening. I do not know whether he pulled it out or not; nor did I at the time suspect that he did. I was not down the cellar that day that I remember, though I might have been. I got to the office the morning after the robbery not later than ten minutes after 8 o'clock. Mr. Aitken went in a ahead of me and went right up stairs. The first I heard of the robbery was that the safe had been robbed. The first thing "Jed" asked me was if I had been down early in the morning. Occasionally I do go early. I said "no." He said somebody has been here. I asked why, and he said that when he came down he found the window back of Messervey's office open. I was the first to go into the cellar, not more than 15 or 20 minutes after. I saw the box of pipes under the outside hatch standing on end with footmarks on it. On Friday morning Blatch's name was connected with the robbery. I thought it strange when Blatch passed me looking for his can, that he did answer me. I do not know how this can got down into the cellar.
Cross-examined by Mr. Davies—If I was sitting down at Messervey's desk, a person could not see me until he came within two or three paces. Blatch passed me over six feet from me. I was sitting down, and the counter was about on a level with my head. When I used the word "minute" in my answer I meant a short space of time. I cannot say exactly how long. Blatch did not say to me that he saw his can in the cellar. You can see the cellar floor from the top of the hatch. I have several times put the stick in the staple of the outside hatch. I remember one occasion last fall, but I cannot say whether it went in easily or not. The stick is loose and can easily be taken out. I have taken it out since the robbery. I am not sure that this is the same plug that was in the hatch at the time of the robbery. When I stood over the hatch I was looking down, but did not think of keeping Blatch in sight. I will not swear he was down in the cellar a minute; the time was very short. (Witness was timed from which it appeared that Blatch was down in the cellar about 15 seconds.) I think I told Mr. Aitken the direction I saw Blatch coming from down there. I might have told the Marshal but cannot remember. I did not take the money. I was home that night. I think I went home direct from the office. From the way those nails were put in, I think the doors could be burst open without injuring them. I remember hearing afterwards that one of the nails was bent. They do not appear to be so now, but there was another nail. I got no wages as yet.

On Friday morning, at the opening of the Court, Mr. Davies argued for the right of witnesses to be examined in the defence of the prisoner. Counsel quoted many authorities to sustain his argument.
Mr. McLeod followed, quoting authorities to show that such a right was to be exercised only in certain cases, which cases were not analogous to the one now proceeding. If the Magistrate thought that he could exercise a discretion in the matter, Mr. McLeod contended that it could only be so after Blatch had been asked for a statement, and after that statement had been made.
His Honor the Stipendiary Magistrate said that he wished not to give a decision at once on the matter, and adjourned the case until Monday. In case His Honor decided in favor of Blatch's counsel, Mr. Davies proposed to call the following witnesses for the defence:—Samuel Stumbles, George Hughes, Frederick Hughes, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Ellis, Blatch's servant, and probably two other witnesses.

Ellis Bartlett, the father of Mr. Ashmead Bartlett Burdett Courts, was son of a farmer, and born at Plymouth in 1817. He graduated A. M. at Amherst in 1842, and after teaching school at New Bedford, went into business in New York. While at New Bedford he met Miss Ashmead of Philadelphia, who had accompanied her brother on a visit to New Bedford, and married her. Shortly after his death he returned to New Bedford, where he died in 1852. His cousin, with whom his brother was formerly in business, is a prominent fish dealer there and highly respected.

Milwaukee complains of high taxes municipal corruption, a badly smelling river, filthy streets and an influx of squint eyed strangers who sell lottery tickets and work other rackets. And yet, if an outsider hints that Milwaukee isn't the paradise of the earth, Milwaukee folks get mad as wet hens.

Instantaneous photograph has achieved another triumph. The London Times says that Dr. Candèze has recently proved the practicability of photographing landscape from the window of a train moving at the rate of fifteen miles an hour; Wonderfully distinct views have been obtained.

President Arthur, it is reported, is suffering from kidney disease, which threatened to become fatal within a short time. A crank applied at New York, on Saturday, for permission to carry a pistol with which to shoot the President.

A decision in the Supreme Court of Philadelphia declares that bay-window or overhanging the side walk are an unjustifiable encroachment on the public highway, prejudicial to the interests of the community and the rights of individual property-owners in the city.
