Debate Is Re-opened As Crews Battle Snow

REVELSTOKE, B.C. (CP)— Rogers Pass, a $45,000,000 link in the Trans-Canada Highway that winds down the western slopes of the Rocky Mountains, will be kept open.

The word came from Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi in Victoria as controversy built up around the snow-battered, 90-mile route. The Rogers Pass road was completed late last summer.

The Pass was closed New Year's Day when the snow pack, built up by 100 inches of new wet fall in one week, released a series of avalanches onto the roadway. It was re-opened the next day.

Mr. Gaglardi made his remarks following a statement by Charles E. Batten, retired CPR engine driver who once pushed trains through the area.

Mr. Batten said Thursday he believes snow will force the Pass route to be closed to vehicular traffic.

"The engineer who made that statement—in all due deference to his experience—is living a decade in the past," the highways minister said.

"We have the men and equipment to keep the road open and we most certainly will. The situation we faced New Year's Day was a freak one and we do not anticipate this happening too often.

BUILDS FOR THREE YEARS

Mr. Batten said in an interview at his home in Vernon, B.C.:

"Snow will build up for a period of three years before it comes down in any appreciable measure. Then, when it does watch out. The only way they can ever keep the highway open all year is to build one continuous snow shed through the pass. "But of course the cost would be fantastic."

One of the nine snow sheds in the pass saved four persons—one of them a baby—during the New Year holiday. Their car was trapped in the shed by an avalanche which blocked both ends of the shed.

Mr. Gaglardi said he has asked engineers to check the sheds and recommend lengthening where necessary.

The threat of avalanches was one of the points raised by groups opposed to selection of the Rogers Pass route as a Trans-Canada Highway link in 1956.

A proposed railway line through the area in 1916 was abandoned after slides had killed 236 workmen during the preceding 30 years.

Meat Prices Are Expected To Be Strong

OTTAWA (CP) — Housewives will remain hard-pressed for bargains at the meat market in the coming month, the agriculture department said in its monthly food outlook.

Lamb and pork prices are likely to go up slightly and beef prices probably will remain fairly steady.

Turkey — if one can talk the family into eating another one so soon—probably will be a good buy. Prices may weaken and with plentiful supplies of all weights, turkey will continue as a good buy.

Supplies of broiler chickens will be smaller than a year ago but little price change is expected.

Pot roasts, stew and ground beef are expected to be better buys than steaks and oven roasts. Fresh pork cuts will be greater supply than in recent weeks.

EGGS PLENTIFUL

Egg supplies will be plentiful in January, with laying flocks at their peak, and prices will be a few cents below mid-December levels.

Some firming of potato prices in eastern Canada may be evident during the month as a result of the current year's smaller stocks.

Supplies of Anjou pears from British Columbia and a large supply of canned Kieffer pears from Ontario may provide an attractive alternative to imported citrus products. Apples may be in greater demand because of the increase in citrus prices due to winter damage to the Florida crop last month.

SNOW SETS RECORD

SYDNEY (CP)—The 51 inches of snow that fell in this Cape Breton Island city in December set a 45-year record. Weatherman Roland Richards says the previous high mark was 46 inches in 1917. Sydney's average December snowfall is 17 inches.

Opening lead—six of clubs.

It is quite easy to make a mistake in defense in certain hands unless you are very much on your toes. Mechanical plays work out well in some deals, but they are bound to take their toll from time to time in others.

Look at this hand where the defense slipped. West led a club, taken in dummy with the king. Declarer played a spade, East followed low, and South won with the king. Declarer then cashed the ace of clubs, discarding a heart from dummy, and ruffed a club.

He next played a heart, which West took with the queen, but there was nothing West could then do to defeat the contract. So South made four spades, losing a spade, a heart and a diamond in the process.

Now it is perfectly true that in most hands East should play low with the A-4 when a spade is led from dummy. This follows the general principle that second hand (in defense) usually plays low.

However, in this case, East should have gone up with the ace. He should have realized that South had the ace of clubs (aces are seldom underled against suit contracts) and that declarer could win the spade and discard a heart from dummy on the ace of clubs. (In fact, it was even possible for South to have had the A-Q of clubs and discard two hearts from dummy.)

If East had taken the spade ace at once and returned a heart, the contract would have been defeated. Declarer would have lost a spade, two hearts and a diamond to go down one.

It is possible that East hoped his partner had the Q-X of spades and that declarer might finesse the jack, but this was a farfetched hope. The spector of the ace of clubs in South's hand, and possibly the Queen also, should have driven East to go up with the ace of spades immediately.

He had a far better chance of stopping the contract by attacking hearts than by playing possum.
