

She Strangled the Baby.

A woman was recently put on her trial in France for strangling her baby, and at the preliminary examination she confessed her crime.

Safety at Last.

They sat contentedly on the sofa, and she whirled his watch-chain, as he gazed fondly into her will-be-ask-me-to-night eyes.

"Stay, stay, Adolphus." "Nay, Papline, my love. My fears rise up and play the craven coward with my soul."

"Nay, my love, the sound that smote thine ear was but the noise of father's boot-jack as it struck the wall. He's talking off his boots."

One Good Turn Deserves Another

"Who is that handsome young woman that sometimes waits on the table?" asked a new boarder.

"You mean the lady just coming in with the syrup jug?" "Yes; she's very pretty, ain't she?"

"The daughter of the house, I presume?" "Why, no; that's the boarding missus herself."

The new boarder's inquiry and his flattering comments on her personal appearance soon reached the ears of the landlady, and now that boarder eats tenderloin and has the airiest and sunniest room in the house.—Boston Courier.

Prudently Retired.

"Well, I never knew that before," said Mrs. Gumidge, looking over the edge of her newspaper.

"What's that, my dear?" asked Mr. G. "Why that Mr. Parnell is a bachelor!"

"Well, you might have guessed it. He's in favor of home-rule."

Mrs. Gumidge was silent a long, long time, wondering just what her husband meant. Meantime Mr. Gumidge went out and sat on the back doorstep like a prudent man.—Chicago News.

A Strange Kind of Butter.

"I see that a Chicago landlady has shot a boarder for joking about the butter," remarked the Judge.

"That must have been a queer kind of butter," responded the Major.

"Why?" "That it was not strong enough to resist the insult itself."—Pittsburg Chronicle.
