NEWS NOTES

It is reported that both Germany and Austria have given orders for strengthening their eastern fortresses.
A Calcutta despatch says Gouropore has been partially destroyed by fire. The fire is believed to have been incendiary. Damage $120,000.
The new French Government has intimated its intention of upholding the decrees dissolving the religious confraternities in France.
The mobilization of 150,000 Turkish troops is projected in view of probable complications in Bulgaria which may necessitate an occupation of the Balkans.
A despatch from Alexandria says the military element reigns supreme, backed up by Sone Pasha who does his utmost to show sympathy with the existing movement.
The World's London special says:—The Radicals are now declaring in favor of making the House of Lords a purely deliberative body, and depriving it of the power of interfering with the legislation of the Lower House.
A despatch from Bucharest says Rumania is preparing for war. The management of all the railways have been ordered to hold all their rolling stock in readiness to be at the disposal of the Minister of War.
A Vienna despatch says:—Copies of an indictment, covering twenty six folios, have been handed to eight persons charged with contributing by negligence to the recent fire in the Ring theatre. Two hundred and twenty six witnesses have been summoned, the trial to commence on the 2nd of May.
The "Northern Light" is now frozen in the middle of a huge cake of ice, which at present is drifting around Pictou Island. Strange to say the ice field, with the impregnated steamer, has completely circumnavigated the Island once and is now half way round again. The "N L" will probably be at its very little more this winter.—Pictou Standard.
The St. Petersburg Herald says precautions have been taken to prevent henceforth high Russian public servants taking the liberty of discussing matters of State policy on their own account. It is hoped this authoritative announcement will induce the foreign press (especially the press of the neighbouring Empire) to cease using hostile and offensive language toward Russia.
M. Vambéry shows that by her new treaty with Persia Russia has acquired a vast agricultural territory, extending almost up to the gates of Herat, while at the same time she has reduced the Shah to the position of a mere puppet in her hands. He happily describes the policy of "Russia's Liberal friends on the Thames" as "a policy devoid of all logic and reason," the vicious consequences of which hardly admit of ever being remedied.

A Pleasant Rencontre.

To the Editor of the Examiner.
Six.—A few weeks ago I left Oxford in a third-class carriage. On arriving at Didcot, a well known Junction on the Great Western, at 8 o'clock, p. m. I had barely time to rush into another carriage as the train for Farington was waiting. On taking my seat, I observed a soldier apparently asleep on one of the seats. We were the only occupants of the carriage. When the train started, and before we were well out of the station, he suddenly started up, putting himself into a fighting and menacing position. He said "that I had stolen his kit, &c." I assured him that I was mistaken, told him that I was a clergyman. After a short time he became quiet, and blundered out a lame sort of apology. During this little scene I began to reflect that I was alone, with a tall, young and apparently very powerful man, to a certain extent under the influence of liquor. To say the truth, I began to feel uncomfortable.
At the expiration of a few minutes, he suddenly started up and said in a most excited manner "What did you think of Lefroy?"—i. e. the man who had just been hanged for the murder of Mr. Gould in a first-class carriage on the Brighton Railroad? I answered, "I think he has met with his deserts." He replied, looking very ferociously at me, "Oh, you think so, do you? Lefroy did not go the right way to work! He used a pistol, which makes too much noise altogether. This is the right thing to use." He then brought a razor from his pocket, took it out of the case, keeping his eye fixed upon me all the time. He went through the process of feeling the edge, converting, at the same time, the sleeve of his coat and the pan of his hand into a sort of exorbitant razor stop.
I thought it was quite time, at any rate, to say something, as I felt quite sure, from his looks, that I could do but little. I looked at him steadfastly in the face (we were sitting at opposite corners of the carriage), and said very deliberately, "Murder is a very awful crime. You wear the uniform of Her Majesty. Surely it has never even entered into the mind of a fine-looking fellow like you to be guilty of such a crime?" He did not answer me. There seemed to be a sort of conflict going on within, and he appeared to hesitate. To my great relief, however, his next step was to return the razor to its case, and then to his pocket. My feelings may be better imagined than described, when almost immediately, I felt the train to be stopping, and the guards, with attentional voice, called out the familiar word: "Steventon." Under the circumstances, thinking "discretion to be the best part of valor," I was not very long before I placed my feet on terra firma. Leaving my very unpleasant travelling companion to his cogitations, I entered the next compartment. On arriving at Uffington, where we change for Farington, I had merely time to say to the guard that it would be at his peril if he allowed any one to enter the carriage I had left. My military companion was, in consequence, locked up, for the remainder of his journey which ended at Bristol. He had given me to understand that he belonged to the Militia, and was returning to the Parish of St. Philips and St. Jacobs in Bristol, where strange to say a valued clerical friend of my own, is doing a very excellent work among thousands of the roughest class of the population.
I am very truly yours,
A FORMER P. E. ISLAND CLERGYMAN.

Personal.
A WELL KNOWN London physician has been arrested for complicity in the tact of Earl Crawford's body.
MR. BRADLAUGH has gone to Northampton, and begun his canvas. He will be returned again beyond a doubt.
It is stated that two thousand Hebrews fled from Russia into Austria, where they are now starving. Ten thousand more will be sent to them out of the Lord Mayor's fund.
"VALENTY FAIR" says the present gambling mania in private life is carried to such lengths as to be one serious social scandal. Large sums, it is said, are lost and won, and some well known ladies are pointed out as regular layers.
"I DRINK LIKE A BEAST," temperate people have been heard to exclaim, meaning thereby that they know when they have had enough and stop. But beasts do not always know when to quit drinking, if the liquor put before them is other than water, as proved by a case which occurred at Berlin, Wis., the other day, when a hundred cows got drunk owing to a barrel of corn brandy being accidentally turned into their trough. To temperate people after all, it will be seen, are scarcely justified by the facts in exalting the brute kind above their fellow men, for when the opportunity offers they both appear about on the same level.—Mail.
STATISTICS of Lunatic Asylums show that nine-tenths of their patients are brought to their condition by abuses of the generative organs. A great Brain and Nerve food, known as Mack's Magnetic Medicine, is sold by our druggists, and comes highly recommended as an unfailing cure in all these diseases. Sold in Charlottetown by Apothecaries Hall Co. See the advertisement in another column.
