A DAY DREAM.
I can see her now, how plainly to my memory comes the sight Of that sweet old wrinkled face, to me so dear; Framed in curls that formed a halo of the softest, purest white.
Lighted up by eyes so tender, blue and clear.
Oh, the wondrous tales she told,
Of the robber knights of old,
That used to fill my boyish soul with glory.
But she brushed away all fear Of the softest, purest white.
As she kissed and tucked me in my trundle bed.

What a tender, loving smile was always on that dear old face;
And what music did that thin, sweet voice employ.
What a world of consolation found I in that boundless grace, That would let her see no evil in her boy.
Oh, how beautifully blessed,
Was the curly head that pressed That bosom, as she crooned some quaint old story on.
Gently rocking to and fro
In the evening's twilight glow, So contented from all chance of harm or wrong.
Many years have come and gone since I saw that dear old face; Many years of toil and blessing, pain and joy;
But there always will remain within my heart a tender place, For that guardian angel to a wayward
boy.
Little prayers learned at her knee, Little stories told to me, In those early days, come crowding back to my mind.
And, oh, what would I not give O'er those days that live, Basking in my dear old granny's tender smile.

HE WAS A GENTLEMAN.
A few years ago one of the leading citizens of Buxter City, the county seat of Buxter county, Texas, got on a big drunk, began to shoot up things and raise old Nicky generally. Even in those days this sort of thing had gone out of fashion, and the county sheriff attempted to arrest the disturber. Result: The sheriff killed the leading citizen, and the leading citizen killed the sheriff, causing a vacancy in the sheriff's office. This brought along a new sheriff and a new deputy sheriff.
The deputy was a good man and a brave man. He knew how to use a gun, and had the courage to do so if necessary. He had the reputation of being a man with whom it was far better to use diplomacy than force. With all these qualities he had had no official experience, but of this he gained a great deal the first time he ever made an arrest. It happened this way:
Some miles from Buxter City is a little collection of houses and stores known as Fishhook. A young man had come through there riding a horse of such good quality as to attract universal attention.
He was anxious to sell the horse, and was willing to sell at a price far below its real value. It was beyond anyone's comprehension why the man wanted to sell at such a price, unless he knew the horse. Hence, the citizens of Fishhook rallied together and took him in charge as a horse thief, put him under guard and sent word down to Buxter City that they had a horse thief to be made out of one from the sheriff's office to come up, get the prisoner and take him to the county jail. In response to this message the new deputy rode over. He had a new horse, a new saddle that squeaked as he rode along, and a new six shooter—45-caliber, with curved ivory handle, slung rak-ably over his right hip. He carried a grim pair of handcuffs that were not new, but serviceable.
When he reached his destination he found the man he was after sitting in a chair in one of the stores, with a circle of stern, Winchester-bearing Fishhookers sitting all around him. The man had on good clothes, and did not look like a horse thief would be supposed to look.
The deputy told him he would be obliged to come along, and to put his hands so he could put the handcuffs on.
The man turned pale when he heard this, and especially when he saw the cruel iron.
"I'm a stranger here charged with being a criminal. I am innocent and hence more than willing to go with you, as my innocence can be proven. I profess to be a gentleman, and would like to be treated as one. Put me on the slowest old horse you can find, have me ride in front all the way. You are armed, I am unarmed, hence I couldn't escape if I wanted to. For God's sake, though, don't disgrace me by taking me through the country with these fellows on my back." The man's looks, his earnestness and his horror of the handcuffs impressed the deputy, and he felt very much like relent-ing, but he didn't. It was his duty, and it behooved him to be careful. Duty was duty and it wouldn't do to take chances. So he snapped the handcuffs on the man's wrists and led him out. Both mounted their horses, the prisoner with some considerable difficulty bound as he was, and the deputy tied on end of a rope to the bit of his own horse and the other end to the bits of the horse supposed to have been stolen.
The road was long, uninteresting and very sandy. Their progress was necessarily slow and they went along for some time in silence side by side. Now, the deputy was a sociable, kindly man, who loved to talk and he talked on, and he stood it as long as he could, but finally opened up a conversation and his companion responded. The prisoner turned out to be a man of letters. He could talk about anything and talk knowingly. He told stories and experiences, novel and interesting.
So they rode on together, meeting a few people, who looked at them curiously, until finally they entered a long, straight stretch of road between two high barbed wire fences. Open fields were on either side, and not a human being in sight.
Over to the left, low in the air, a few buzzards were circling lazily.
"I wonder what those buzzards are after," casually remarked the prisoner, nodding his head in that direction, and the deputy looked over at them. This was the climax of the deputy's errors.
For awhile he looked away, quicker than you could say "cat," easily and gently the prisoner leaned over and with his hand brushed the beautiful, new leather-handled six-shooter from his holster, and when the deputy looked around he looked right square into his muzzle, and the countenance of his former prisoner behind it looked like trouble. He was caught. The conditions were reversed, and he was too shocked and surprised to say a word.

"Get down off that horse!" These words rang quick and sharp.
The deputy was a brave man, but he was sensible and not foolhardy. He got down.
"Walk out there in the road ten feet; turn around and stand still."
The deputy walked ten feet as near as he could estimate, and, turning around, stood at attention like a well-drilled soldier. While he was doing this the man dismounted.
"Give me the key to these things over here to me."
Really the deputy ought not to have brought that key along, but he had it, and he threw it over. It fell in the dust at the man's feet. The man knelt down, laid the gun just in front of him, and picked up the key, and, using his teeth, knocked the handcuffs. They dropped to the ground and he was free. The deputy watched him in a dazed kind of way, trying vainly to think of something to say or do. He wasn't given time.
"Go over to that fence on your right!"
Over the deputy marched.
"Put one hand over that second strand of wire as far as your wrist and the other under it."
The deputy obeyed.
Then the man walked up with the pistol in one hand, and with the other he snapped the handcuffs on the deputy's wrists and on the inclosed strand of wire. The deputy was sealed to that fence as tight as if he had been frozen there.
Meanwhile the horse was quietly grazing along the roadside. The fast man disengaged them from each other, and, mounting his own, rode up to the deputy, shook the key at him and said:
"When you arrest a man, take a watch to a gentleman. I'll keep this key as a memento and wear it as a watch chain.
Adios and an revoir." Off he cantered down the road.
Two hours after old man Peabody came riding along on his saddle mare Sally.
He noticed a loose horse grazing down the road, and a man near it, and he closed up against the fence. The man at once began to "holer" to him. He noticed the man didn't wave his hands, so he rode down and investigated the matter.
The old man had a pocketknife with a file blade, and with some loss of sweat, released the deputy from the wire. But he could do nothing with the handcuffs.
Nobody could get at blacksmith. The deputy's horse was captured, the deputy mounted, and together they rode to Buxter City. The appearance of the deputy handcuffed as he was, created no end of excitement and inquiry.
That night one of the biggest posers in the history of Buxter county struck out, but it left no trace of the man who was wanted. To this day if you should tell the deputy of a man in South Africa wearing a key as a watch chain the deputy would go right over there after him.
—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A New Illuminant.
Acetylene, the most powerful illuminant of the hydro-carbons, can now be produced on a commercial scale, says Professor Lewis in a paper read before the Society of Engineers. It is a colorless, gas, intensely penetrating smell resembling garlic, so that the smallest leakage would be quickly detected. Five cubic feet of the gas will give a light equal to 500 candles for an hour. It is made by mixing four parts by weight of finely ground chalk or lime with twenty-four parts by weight of any form of powdered carbon in an electric furnace and adding water; the product is lime and chalcid carbide, a pound of which will yield 3.3 cubic feet of acetylene. The carbide is worth about $30 a ton; the gas would cost about $1.00 a thousand feet, but its illuminating power would make its cost equal to coal gas at 12 cents a thousand.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Short Sentences.
A disciple perpetuates the glory of the master; an imitator squanders it.
There is more to be hoped from coarse extraction than from late degeneration.
In certain personal matters it is more satisfactory to be displeased by one's self than pleased by another.
Scorn whom we scorn and ridicule whom we ridicule, or be scorned and ri-culed with them, saith the fool.
A man's usefulness is less dependent upon what he knows than upon his ability to investigate and learn.
An inherited tendency to theft is not so often an exaggeration of the secretive faculty as the meaningless reflection of it.
—Katharine Gordon, in Judge.

Sign Language.
Women can talk the whole length of a pew and understand each other's naming—or think they do. A case occurred in Kenderton church, Philadelphia, a few Sundays ago. An occupant of a pew formed the words: "How sweet is made in lock," to another, and then put her finger to her lips as though to chide the rising thought in a sacred place. At the close of the service her friend said: "I did not know what you were saying until you put your finger to your mouth; then I knew it was: 'Come home to lunch.'"—N. Y.
Times.

Unpublished Manuscript.
It is estimated that about 75 per cent. of book manuscripts offered to book publishers never become books. As a member of a Boston publishing house once said that if one manuscript in a hundred of those offered proved acceptable he thought it a very good average. Yet the vast mass of literary productions continues to grow vast every year. It is at present a fashion to make more little books than formerly, and among the newest books are half a dozen which may be read through in an hour.—Boston Transcript.

Boats Made of Aluminum.
Some of the boat builders in New England have discarded the use of aluminum in the building of shells. At first the extreme lightness of this metal made it a favorite, but it has been found that it will corrode, and the shell will then be full of pin holes. On the other hand, musical instruments makers are using aluminum in the manufacture of drums.
Made of this material, they are not only of light weight but give out a better tone than the ordinary article.—Hardware.

supplies new blood to the exhausted system, thus giving a new lease of life. Miller's Emulsion is made from the Oil of the Norwegian Cod Liver, and in conjunction with hypophosphites of lime and soda forms the greatest fertilizer of the age.
Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve Gentlemen,—About three or four weeks ago I had an attack of Itching Piles. I tried two or three different remedies recommended by druggists as "the best and

About this time I was beginning to de-

Within the memory of middle-aged people Consumption and other lung troubles were much more prevalent and fatal than they are to-day. The existing improvement in the public health in this respect widespread appreciation of sanitary laws; the use of Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, have largely aided in the good work.

The estimated number of papers for England and Wales is 800,000 for a population of 29,000,000. The United States have 1,200,000 idle men but how many papers is not given.

Heart Disease Relieved in 30 Minutes.
Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gives perfect relief in all cases of Organic or Sympathetic Heart Disease in 30 minutes, and speedily effects a cure. It is a peerless remedy for Palpitation, Shortness of Breath, Smothering Spells, Pain in Left Side and all symptoms of a Diseased Heart.
One dose convinces. Sold by S. W. Bodd.

A Miss Ethel Belmont, a handsome young girl of Victoria, B. C., created a sensation by making her appearance the other day on a bicycle on one of the principal streets in a bloomer costume. The citizens came all out to gaze on her but the police informed her that unless she disappeared off the street she would be run in.
If too rapid eating causes dyspepsia, and it in its turn produces nervous exhaustion, debility, weakness, anaemia, etc., the first step in effecting a cure is to eat slowly.
The second and most important is to take a course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, which aids the process of digestion, invigorates the stomach, renews the vitality of the blood, relieves brain fatigue, and makes weak nerves strong.

What is
CASTORIA
Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrup, and Castor Oil.
It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
D. G. C. OSOON,
Lowell, Mass.
"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as a superior to any prescription known to me."

Advertisers!
The home circulation is the most valuable for advertisers. THE EXAMINER reaches the homes of our citizens every evening. That accounts for our large advertising patronage.
THE EXAMINER PUB. COMPANY.
The WEATHER.—Fresh northerly to westerly winds; clearing; not much change in temperature.
