may cause hard-ships to some agencies. "We trust they will bear with us through this difficult period," he added.

HIDDEN UNDER BUSHEL

Major O.R. Simons, provincial campaign chairman, in his report felt that "the wonderful work that all the agencies are doing is hidden under a bushel basket as far as publicity is concerned." He called for improved and increasing agency publicity for the coming year with emphasis on human interest stories.

Major Simons reviewed the organization for the financial campaign and noted particularly the Payroll Liaison Committee which was organized to keep in contact with the business establishments throughout the year so that management would be kept well informed and problems and questions answered. He congratulated those divisional chairmen who met or exceeded their objectives, and also the Town of Summerside for having attained the highest percentage of any area.

DIRECTORS REPORT

Jack Ambler, executive director, reported that "the Budget Committee continued to do an effecive job of scrutiny on agency budgets but it is curtailed in its operations by the need to keep our objective within reasonable limits."

"The actual agency requirements for 1964 amounted to $29,175.00 more than it was thought advisable to include in our campaign objective," he stated. "This is a gap that we must aim to close if we are to fulfill our purpose".

In analyzing statistics of the first United Fund campaign conducted in the province, Mr. Ambler reported that "we are comparable to other funds of the same size in most areas of giving. We are low on the percentage participation of employees in payroll plans — 67 percent as against 75 percent for comparable funds. This will be even less favorable if our current camaign trends hold true.) The average firm gift per employee is somewhat less than that in comparable funds — $4.62 against $7.00, and the average residential gift is also lower at $3.02 against $7.24. Although figures do not always give the complete picture — many variable factors have to be considered — it is possible to see that, even when we reach our objective, we have room for improvement. With the continued growth of our organization, we should be able to meet the challenge and raise the full amount that our agencies require for balanced service."

A day-long public relations clinic was held preceding the annual meeting and banquet in the evening at which the keynote speaker was W.J. Hancox, publisher of The Guardian and The Evening Patriot.

The large number of workers, agency representatives and fund officials were welcomed by president, Frank W. Curtis.

Glenn Hancock, Imperial Oil Ltd., Halifax, David Orr, CBC information services in the Maritimes, and James J. McKeage, vice- president of Public and Industrial Relations Limited, Halifax, who are assisting the United Fund in organizing its public relations work in future campaigns, were introduced by chairman of the clinic, Ralph Rupert.

Party Leadership Vote Said Over Emphasized

"The vote on the resolution of confidence in the party leader is but one of the items of business at our annual meeting next month," Heath Macquarrie, MP told the Fifth Queens Progressive Conservative Women's Association last night.

"Considerations of policy, platform and organization will, I am sure, be a vital and interesting part of our first national get-together since the election of April."

Mr. Macquarrie, a member of the resolution committee, urged the women's association to submit their views and suggestions on how the party can best serve Canada. Already the committee has received more than 200 resolutions containing many useful, interesting and challenging ideas, he said.

As I have said before whether the resolution of confidence is taken by ballot, show of hands or standing vote Mr. Diefenbaker will win a massive majority. Because so much attention has been given this particular vote it is important that we not allow too much emphasis to be attached to the possibility that it may be less than completely unanimous.

"If a ballot were taken at a national Liberal meeting, would Mr. Pearson receive an unanimous flood of 'yes' votes? From what I hear in various parts of the country such an enthusiastic endorsaiton would be most unlikely, he stated.

The Queen's member discussed various aspects of Dominion government action and spoke of the federal-provincial conference on fisheries.

As a member of the House of Commons marine and fisheries committee. Mr. Macquarrie along with Hon. Angus MacLean and Mr. Mullally, sat in on some of the sessions.

He paid special tribute to the intelligent and helpful presentation of Hon. Leo Rossiter and Deputy Minister Eugene Gorman.

ARDA PROGRAM

Mr. Macquarrie expressed the hope that with the appointment of a new minister for ARDA and Forestry more interest will be shown in the ARDA program which has seemed to languish since Hon. Alvin Hamilton left office.

"The ARDA program is one of the most imaginative and progressive moves taken by any government. I am happy that A.T. Davidson, the director and a very able man is coming to P.E.I. soon for conversations. The Island plans were most impressive and Mr. Davidson should find his talks with Premier Shaw extremely helpful.

I am convinced that no man in Canada is more aware of the potentialities of the ARDA program or better informed on its scope and purpose than our own premier".

CAUSEWAY PROGRESS

The Queens member declared that he would inquire from the government when the session resumed on the progress of the causeway.

"It will be interesting to know why the new scale model is to be built in New Brunswick rather than in Charlottetown where I am informed a building of ample space was available."

Farm Economy Angles Slated For Discussion

By NEIL MATHESON
Provincial And Farm Editor

The important part family life plays in farm operations is one of the many interesting phases of agricultural activity that will be discussed at a meeting in Summerside next Monday, Feb. 3, which will deal with the comprehensive subject "Our business—the Farm".

Arrangements for the meeting which will be held in the auditorium of the George R. Pearkes VC Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion, have been made by Murray MacEwen, manager of Seeman Brothers (Canada) Limited, New Annan, and Don P. Wood, vice-president and general manager of Prima Fertilizers Limited, Kensington.

The part which family life plays in the farm operation will be discussed by Dr. Irving Fellows who comes all the way from the University of Connecticut, U.S.A.

Dr. H.L. Patterson, an economist, comes from the Ontario department of agriculture to give some figures and information that will illustrate the economy of what has been done and what is being planned for the future of farming in his province. Dr. Patterson is the immediate past president of the Agricultural Institute of Canada.

Mr. Wood is really enthused over the program, he said in a recent telephone conversation. And he has reasons to be, apparently for the program covers many angles of the farm economy.

The sessions start at 10.15 a.m. with remarks by Agriculture Minister MacRae and many speakers, including some of the Island's top farmers, will be heard during the day. Premier Walter Shaw will discuss changing trends in agriculture at the evening banquet that gets underway at 6.00.

A panel discussion late in the afternoon will feature such men as Agriculture Minister MacRae, William Johnstone, a retired farmer; Dr. Fellows, Dr. Patterson, Mr. Yeo and J. Petit, a large farm operator from Canning, N.S., who is expected to speak on "The Farm Manager" in the forenoon and Norman Black, Canada experimental farm, Charlottetown will discuss "The Man in Management", also at the forenoon session.

Montague Centennial Group To Call Meeting On Rink Plan

MONTAGUE — A meeting of the Montague Regional Strawberry Festival was held Monday night in the town council chambers.

It was announced by the committee chairman Mrs. Peter Sinclair that the Don Messer group will take an active part in the Friday program which includes parades of floats, bands, and the crowning of the strawberry queen at the coronation ball in the Montague Regional High School, Friday, July 17.

It was also the decision of this executive meeting to have the Sky Divers engaged for one of the three days of the program.

One other decision was to have a musical and variety show for the Thursday night program, and the festival chairman, G. Arnold Wightman is to look into this matter.

Ken MacDonald is to contact the provincial centennial committee with reference to several matters one of which is the visit of a naval craft to Montague for the three days. Peter Sinclair who is in charge of bands and parades also presented a brief report.

Mr. Wightman advised that Athol MacKinnon would take charge of a display of model ships which could be on display in the Garden of the Gulf Museum if a more suitable location could not be procured.

Other items on the agenda for consideration and which will most likely take place on one of the three days are: a wild animal display, doll carriage parade, soap box derby, a street dance which will be under the direction of the Montague Fire department.

DECORATIONS

Alan Nelson who is in charge of decorations and Illumination would be decorating all entrances to the town with stringers and flags which would get underway early in June. He also advised that the Garden of the Gulf Museum would most likely be illuminated for the occasion.

The sports program is well underway and is expected to be held in the new high school track and field area where it is also expected that several tents will be placed to supply meals for the festival period. A midway will be engaged for the amusement of all at or near this location.

At the present time the major problem for this committee is to find someone to take charge of the catering and feeding which is bound to be a major one. Several suggestions as to how to handle this problem have been put forth with one idea almost the only solution and that is it will have to be a buffet style service. The meals will include everything possible of a strawberry nature.

It is also proposed to have a section where an all fish meal with such things as lobster, clams, and other seafoods can be served.

GENERAL MEETING

Following this general meeting one of the more important aspects of the centennial program, a permanent project for the region, came in for a long discussion. The original proposal, an artificial hockey rink, was thought by a previous meeting to be impossible, however after considerable discussion it was decided that the centennial committee engage a hall and call a general meeting, try to impress the general public that this is a meeting they must attend and see if something concrete could not be decided upon.

If this meeting did not meet the expectations of the centennial committee than it would have no alternative except to go along with other suggestions.
