FACTS

It is a fact that we have the best assortment of Midsummer Readymade Clothing in the City This stock has been selected from nice new patterns of tweeds, made up in the latest styles, and are being sold at prices that leave hard times out of the question.

It is a Fact

That we have these goods also in youth's and boys' sizes. Prices corresponding to size—and size for everyone. Our advice would be to see these goods. We are satisfied that for design and price they are not equaled in the city.

It is also a Fact

That if Readymades are not good enough for you we can turn out to your order, the leading custom made goods of the city. Our custom department excells all others in the newness and amount of cloths shown, and in the class of workmen employed.

PLUMBING AND HEATING

Now is the time to have your house heated and plumbed, for in the fall it will be too late, as everybody will be in a rush then and it will cost you a great deal more. So if you are contemplating having any of the above work done, we are prepared to give satisfaction in all its branches at a very low figure. Remember we do all our own work, and can afford to do it cheaper than any others in the business. We thoroughly understand every detail of our business. Jobbing done at short notice. Lawnmowers and other machinery repaired. We also handle the National Dish Washer. Washes, rinses and dries the dishes perfectly of either large or small family in from one to five minutes. No labour, no mess, no slop, no wetting of hands or spoiling of clothes; no broken or chipped dishes, no wiping necessary. Will produce a finer polish than can be done by hand. It is well and durably made of sheet steel, galvanized making it strong and substantial. Best of references.

DOES THIS MEAN YOU?

Trying to Sleep Makes Some People Wide Awake.

It has just been discovered that many persons have been kept awake by trying to go to sleep. This odd statement is susceptible of proof, acording to Jane Ellis Joy, an authority on insomnia.

By a series of experiments on people whose health had been seriously impaired by sleepless nights, the remarkable fact was established that the harder a person, lending himself to the experiment, endeavored to lose consciousness, the more thoroughly awake did he become. Then it became evident that, no matter how strong the will, the mind could not be emptied like a vessel. Successive attempts to make it a blank only aggravated the experimenter. Those who have experienced the fruitless attempts to induce sleep by auto-suggestion will readily appreciate this fact. As quickly as one thought was banished another succeeded it. Then it was determined to woo Morpheus in an entirely new way.

As the mind when awake refuses to be satisfied with nothingness the theory was advanced that it could be so occupied as to actually produce sleep. This was accomplished by a breaking up of the thoughts into words. The thinking faculty which will not rest was exercised with disconnected words, and herein lay the secret of bringing about sleep that was not superinduced by physical or mental fatigue. As is well known, we think and remember in sentences. The mind is continually making assertions and suggestions—saying something about something or asking questions. The questions are sometimes serious, but more often idle and their answers correspondingly valueless, but they keep crowding in until the mental process seems interminable.

By breaking up the thoughts into words and trying to have the words as disconnected as possible, the thoughts gradually give way, and the one lending himself to the experiment sinks into a slumber, although a chronic sufferer from insomnia. In this case the first word that came into the mind was "house." Presently another word followed, but as instructions had been given to let any word bearing any grammatical or associative relation to the first word slip out of the mind without notice that was done. It being found quite possible to do so, although not to banish words entirely.

Then the mind, according to the prearranged plan, sought out a word of a different class—"enthusiasm." Now one disconnected word after another came up until the series ran like this: "House, enthusiasm, Great Britain, walk, twenty, tangible, beyond, superior, Washington," etc. In following out this formula for going to sleep artificially the reader must endeavor to avoid a succession of names and numbers and all classifications of words, for the obvious reason that such a course appeals to the memory and the imagination, and the would-be sleeper gets to thinking in the regular way, which he is trying to escape doing.

It will be found as the disconnected ideas flow on in your mind that you will gradually observe yourself taking a mild interest in the disjointed procession. Then will follow a loss of the agitating self-consciousness, succeeded by a passive state which does not attempt to combat the grotesque parade of words.

PERFECT and permanent are the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it makes pure, rich, healthy, life and health-giving BLOOD.

INSECT CRIMINALS.

Brigand Bees Live by Robbery and Violence.

Almost every form and variety of human crime is common with insects. Cases of theft are noticed among bees. Buchner in his "Physic Life of Animals," speaks of the thievish bees, which in order to save themselves the trouble of working, attack well-stocked hives in masses, kill the sentinels and the inhabitants, rob the hives and carry off the provisions. After repeated enterprises of this description, they acquire a taste for robbery and violence; they recruit whole companies, which get more and more numerous; and finally they form regular colonies of brigand bees.

But it is a still more curious fact that these brigand bees can be produced artificially by giving working bees a mixture of honey and brandy to drink. The bees soon take a delight in this beverage, which has the same disastrous effects upon them as upon men; they become ill-disposed and irritable, and lose all desire to work; and finally, when they begin to feel hungry, they attack and plunder the well-supplied hives.

There is one variety of bees—the Sphecodes—which lives exclusively upon plunder. According to Marchall, this variety is formed of individuals of the Halyates species, whose organs of nidification are defective, and which have gradually developed into a separate variety, living almost exclusively by plunder.

They may be thus said to be an example of innate and organic criminality among insects, and they represent what Prof. Lombroso calls the born criminals—that is, individuals which are led to crime by their own organic constitution.

Seeing the Best Face Upon It.

Stiggles was met by an old friend, the other day, whom he had not seen for several years.

"Bless me, Stiggles, old boy! I'm glad to see you. You are looking well. How is it with you?"

"Fair to middling," replied Stiggles.

"Married yet?"

"Yes."

"That's good."

"Not so very good. I married a shrew."

"Ah! That's bad."

"Not so very bad. She brought me ten thousand dollars."

"Indeed! That was good fortune."

"Not so good, after all; for I laid it out in sheep, and they all died of the foot-rot."

"Surely, that was most unfortunate."

"Not so very unfortunate; for I sold the pelts for more than the sheep cost me."

"In truth, that made ample amendment."

"Not so much as you may imagine. I laid out the money upon a house, and the house burned down, with all that was in it."

"Bless me! That was lamentable, surely."

"Not so lamentable as it might have been. My wife was in it!"

THE QUEEN AND A MOTHER OF SOLDIERS.

The following letter has been received by Col. Charles E. Knox, Commanding the 32 Regtl. Dist.:—

"Windsor Castle, June 27.

"Dear Colonel Knox,—The Queen has been much interested in the case of Mrs. Keveth, living at Garrow, St. Brewara, as reported to me in your letter of the 9th inst.

"Her Majesty considers that the fact of seven sons of one family serving in the Army, all with exemplary characters, reflects infinite credit on themselves and on the parents who have brought them up.

"The Queen desires that you will congratulate Mrs. Keveth, give her the £10 and framed print of her Majesty which I send herewith, and tell her how glad the Queen is to think of this fine example of good and honourable service to their Sovereign and country from the sons of a single Cornish home.

"Her Majesty has kept the photograph of Mrs. Keveth which you sent me, and would be glad to have one of the seven brothers in a group, but if this cannot be obtained of each separately.

"Will you kindly arrange this and send me the account?

"Yours very truly,
ARTHUR BIGGE."

At a parade at Bodmin on Saturday Col. Knox handed to Mrs. Keveth the presents sent by the Queen and read her Majesty's letter.

Spiders That Catch Birds.

Mr. W. J. Rainbow, an Australian naturalist, gives the following description of the large bird-entrapping spiders of his country, which we quote from the American Naturalist: "Representatives of this genus abound in tropical and subtropical regions. Their webs are composed of two kinds of silk, one yellow, exceedingly viscid and elastic, the other white, dry and somewhat brittle. The latter is used for the framework of the web, the guys and radii, and the former for the concentric rings. These snares are at varying heights, sometimes within reach, again 10 to 12 feet from the ground, but always in a position exposed to the rays of the sun. The diameter is also variable, from 3 feet upward. One seen by Graffe in the Fiji Islands constructs a web 30 feet in diameter. These snares are strong enough to entrap small birds. In the author's opinion the web is not set for such game, and the spider does not feed on her ornithological victim. In the cases where she has been observed with her fangs in the body of the ensnared bird it is probable that it is for the purpose of hastening the death of the bird, in order to prevent its injuring the web in its struggles to escape. Spiders of the genus Nephila are easily tamed. Although exceedingly voracious, they can nevertheless exist for many days without either food or water. They pair in autumn. The sexes inhabit the same web for a considerable time, the female in the center and the male on the upper edge of the web. His efforts to ingratiate himself in the favor of his mate are not always successful. It not infrequently happens that he has to retire from her presence minus two or three legs."

Over £10,000,000 sterling is spent every year in charity in the United Kingdom.

VESSEL DAMAGED BY A WHALE.

A Strange Incident that Occurred Lately in Australian Waters.

A strange incident recently occurred in Australian waters. The Brigantine Handa Isler arrived at Sydney Harbor from New Zealand, presenting the appearance of having been struck by a heavy sea, as she was much damaged amidships. The vessel had made a fair voyage from Mercury Bay, New Zealand, with a cargo of timber, up to within ten days of Sydney. Two large whales were sighted, each being about 60 feet in length. At first they appeared to be heading across the ship's bows, but they suddenly slew round and came broadside on to the ship at a tremendous speed. The first whale struck ship amidships, and although the vessel is 260 tons register and was laden with nearly a million feet of timber, the concussion was so great that the vessel shook from stem to stern. The second whale, fortunately, did not ram the ship, but dived just before reaching the Handa Isler, and passed under the keel. The brigantine was badly damaged by the collision, and the whale must have been terribly injured, as the sea around was speedily dyed with its blood, and the animal did not rise after striking the vessel. The well of the ship was at once sounded, and it was discovered that the water was making at the rate of a foot an hour, which, in a vessel so deeply laden, was a very serious matter, Sydney being 220 miles distant. Examination showed that there was a large dent in the side where the whale's head had butted in the planking and frame work. As the water gained on the pumps, the deck cargo was jettisoned, but continuous pumping enabled the crew to finally get the vessel clear. On the next day, the weather being very favorable, a pad composed of green hides, in which pillows had been sewn, was fastened over the dent in the timbers. The inrush of water was thus checked, and the vessel was also enabled to weather the severe gales which followed, and to reach Sydney harbor in safety.

A Druggist's Lesson in Poisons.

It seems scarcely wise for a man in the state of Kentucky to declare that whisky is poison.

But there is a reckless individual in Nicholasville, Ky., who has done it, and done it in a bold, disagreeable sort of way, too.

This person's name, which is apt to be an anathema in Kentucky henceforth, is James W. Gordon. He is in the drug business in Nicholasville. Just how long his neighbors and fellow-townsmen will encourage him in the pursuit of trade is very difficult to say.

Mr. Gordon has gratuitously "rubbed it in" to his compatriots on the somewhat dangerous score of whisky. He has fitted up in the front of his drug store what he calls a poison window, and a bottle of the corn juice dear to the Kentucky heart is there.

The window is a grewsome thing. It is a whole course of lessons to the man who wants to commit suicide. In the middle, white and grinning, is a skull. Clutched in its teeth is the deadly cigarette, an ash clinging at its tip. At the right of the skull is the bottle filled with the good corn juice of the Kentuckian's daddies. At its left is a bottle of port wine. Scattered about in the foreground are cards, dice and poker chips.

The rest of the window is filled with small jars containing liquid poisons and papers upon which are heaped powders enough of various sorts to end the troubles of a regiment. Every article is labelled, from the cigarette to the prussic acid, and to prevent any possible misunderstanding of his meaning Mr. Gordon has fronted the whole deadly collection with a startling sign which reads: "Every article in this window is poison."

What makes the druggist's venture more inexplicable is that he is a voter in Kentucky and carries no life insurance. His pharmacy may be perfectly correct, but his lack of policy is pitiful.

Nearly £1,000,000 worth of patent medicines are exported from the United Kingdom each year.

The most expensive Parliament in Europe is that of France. The two Chambers cost the nation £300,000 annually. Spain spends £120,000 on her representation; Italy £130,000, Britain £150,000.

That

Extreme tired feeling afflicts nearly everybody at this season. The hustlers cease to push, the tireless grow weary, the energetic become enervated. You know just what we mean. Some men and women endeavor temporarily to overcome that

Tired

Feeling by great force of will. But this is unsafe, as it pulls powerfully upon the nervous system, which will not long stand such strain. Too many people "work on their nerves," and the result is seen in unfortunate wrecks marked "nervous prostration," in every direction. That tired
