A STREETLESS TOWN.

It is Also Lightless, Carless, Mayorless, Parkless and All but Houseless.

The most remarkable town in Kentucky lies in Fayette county and is known as Granard.

The town site consists of 52 1/2 acres lying adjacent to the city limits of the city of Lexington on the north. Every foot of the ground is owned by Dennis Mulligan, who came to this country more than 60 years ago and had been in business until last summer in the same house, on the corner of Lime-stone and Vine streets, for 55 years as a grocer. He amassed a large fortune in the business and many years ago bought from old Tommy McCoy the farm which now forms the town of Granard.

Granard has no streets, no alleys, no waterworks, no electric or other lights, no street cars, no fire department, no mayor, no policemen, no aldermen or councilmen, no trustees or any kind of town officers, no lots, parks or any of those things which are usually found in a town. But Granard is a town, as the general statutes of Kentucky show that it was incorporated about 12 years ago by Dennis Mulligan, James H. Mulligan, Louis H. Mulligan, James J. Mulligan and Paul Conlon. The last named incorporator, who was a warm friend of the Mulligans, died several years ago. James H. Mulligan is the well known Judge Mulligan, who has been a conspicuous member of the Kentucky legislature, was consul general to Samoa under President Cleveland and is now an agent of the treasury department. He is the only child of Dennis Mulligan. Louis H. Mulligan, a son of the judge, is a young physician. James J. Mulligan is a younger son of the judge, and he is with his father in a clerical place.

Nobody ever knew the exact reason for the incorporation of this town, which has existed only on paper for a decade. It is stated by old inhabitants that at about the time Granard was incorporated there was a movement on foot to extend the city limits of Lexington, which had the plan been accomplished, would have put Dennis Mulligan to the necessity of paying city taxes on the larger part of the farm he had bought from old man McCoy. Whether or not this is true cannot be learned now. The city limits of Lexington have not been extended, so that the question of the elder Mulligan paying city taxes on the old farm has never been raised.

Mr. Mulligan is a remarkable man. He came here a poor boy about 1832. He went to work in a grocery store and by diligence and economy soon accumulated enough money to begin business for himself. His grocery was always headquarters for the hundreds of his fellow countrymen who had settled in this city and vicinity and were engaged largely in building central Kentucky's magnificent system of highways. They did nearly all their trading with Mulligan, and thus it was that he rapidly accumulated money. He invested the earnings of his business in real estate, and when the historic Maxwell Springs property was offered for sale he bought it and built thereon the palatial suburban home, Maxwell Place, where his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Judge Mulligan, entertains lavishly, and where some of the most distinguished politicians and public men of Kentucky have assembled.

Dennis Mulligan was for many years a member of Lexington's common council and afterward ran for mayor. He was always a great friend of Lexington, and her progress was in many ways assisted by him, but he was always opposed to street cars, especially in narrow streets, and when the present street railroad's charter passed the legislature the only street exempted was Rose street, which extends alongside of Maxwell Place.

Mr. Mulligan's town of Granard is now leased to a German dairyman, Fred Haldeman, who occupies the only house in the town, the old McCoy residence. It is a neat 1 1/2 story brick house of the style of 60 years ago, and here within its shadow almost Mr. Haldeman milks his cows and sings his German songs.

It is proposed to put Granard to new use now that the city authorities of Lexington seem determined to prohibit poolrooms in this city. It is planned to build a poolroom in the confines of Granard at a point nearest the street car line where the belt railroad crosses North Broadway and within sight of the house of the late General W. T. Withers, in which General Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes and King Kalakaua were entertained. The grand jurors of Fayette county are not often so severe on the poolroom operators as to make the fines prohibitive, and it is believed that a poolroom establishment would prove a paying enterprise in Granard. No definite steps have been taken to carry out the plan, and it is likely that nothing will be done before next spring. Should the city authorities continue to wage war on the poolroom men it is more than likely that Granard will begin to grow in the springtime.—New York Sun.

The People's Faith

Firmly Grounded Upon Real Merit—They Know Hood's Sarsaparilla Absolutely and Permanently Cures When All Others Fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is not merely a simple preparation of Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and a little Iodide of Potassium. Besides these excellent alternatives, it also contains those great anti-bilious and liver remedies, Mandrake and Dandelion. It also contains those great kidney remedies, Uva Ursi, Juniper Berries, and Pipsissewa.

Nor are these all. Other very valuable curative agents are harmoniously combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla and it is carefully prepared under the personal supervision of a regularly educated pharmacist.

Knowing these facts, is the abiding faith the people have in Hood's Sarsaparilla a matter of surprise? You can see why Hood's Sarsaparilla cures, when other medicines totally, absolutely fail.

Nye and the Lost Calf.

When Bill Nye was a boy, he and his brother once had a great time searching after a calf that had got lost in a piece of woods. The search was kept up for days. Finally it had to be abandoned. Everybody but the humorist forgot all about it, and he said nothing of it to any one for more than 20 years. One day his brother—the same who had helped in the search—got a letter from "Bill," in which a pending long trip to Europe was described. The letter wound up something like this: "You see, I'm going a long way and shall be away some time. While I'm gone I shall keep a sharp lookout everywhere. Maybe I'll find that darn calf. I've looked for it everywhere in the United States without success, and now I'm going to try the old world."—Argonaut.

Clean Shirts in Germany.

The Berlin Beersen-Courier tells about a Berlin inventor's invention of a paper shirt front which is intended to appeal to the large number of continental Germans who wear dickies. The shirt front has a paper collar and is in seven layers. As each layer is torn off it reveals another white, glistening front. Thus from one paper dicky the wearer may evolve a clean paper shirt front for every day in the week. The dicky is made to button to any kind of shirt. It costs but 80 pfennig, or about 7 cents; consequently the expense of a clean front is but a cent a day. In view of the prevalence of the dicky habit in Germany the inventor has taken steps to manufacture his compound shirt fronts in large quantities.

WITH THE WITS.

A Happy Man.

"Why are you glad?" I asked a man who had a pleasant smile. "You look as if you'd won in love, or else had 'made a pile.'"

"It is not love," the man replied. "That makes me feel so fair. I saw the races yesterday and met a jockey there."

"Aha, you had a 'tip!' " I woen. "Come, tell me, is it so?"

"What was the stake? How was it that you laid the 'talent' low?"

"I had a 'tip,' 'tis true," he said, "and then he laughed outright, 'But the reason why I am so glad is that I didn't bite!'" —Cleveland Leader.

Important Factor Omitted.

"I jst been readin one of them daggone stories," said Farmer Halcie, "about one of them rural cottages all covered with vines and rosebushes."

"Well!" said the summer boarder as the old man paused.

"Well? I been readin that sort of thing all my life, but I never come across the story of the cottage all covered with mortgages."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Born Hobo.

Wearry Baggles was a hobo— There are many of his kind— But such luck as Wearry played in would be difficult to find.

He gawped from sleep one mornin', Found himself a millionaire, So he spent the day adornin' Baggles with the utmost care.

Then he courted, wen and married, And his love was very swell, So those turtledoves he married

In a home where kings might dwell. Everything was done to change him, Even to his thrilling name.

But he still was Wearry Baggles, And a hantabout jax the same, —James Tedman Goodwin in San Francisco Examiner.

The Boss.

The politician grew enthusiastic. "Yes, sir," he said, "all dissatisfaction has vanished in our county, and the party is united to a man."

"Who's the man?"

"In truth, although the companion of the politician was young, it was evident that it wouldn't do to pick him up as a man with no worldly knowledge." —Chicago Post.

Love's Young Dream Today.

They stood beside a singing brook, And he was brave and she was fair, Her little hand in his he took

And pressed a dozen kisses there.

"Oh, let me be thy slave!" he cried, "Oh, let me daily toil for thee!"

But say that you will be my bride And have dominion over me!"

"I want no slave," she made reply, "But what I seek is a money king With means to buy the earth if I Should ever chance to want the thing!" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Was a Paragon.

Mrs. Prim—I want you to meet my daughter, Mr. Wagg. She's a perfect paragon of a young lady.

Mr. Wagg—I think you mean parallelogram, Mrs. Prim.

Mrs. Prim (stiffly)—I said parallelogram, Mr. Wagg.—San Francisco Examiner.

Ambition's Apogee.

The kiss of fame and art for art's sake were his goal

When Chomere, painter, with the world first went to cope,

But now he larely pays for bread and board and coal

By making lurid posters for Van Apple's soap. —Town Topics.

Nebraska Tragedy.

Slowly and painfully, by reason of his defective early education, the grasshopper spelled out the sign in the village park:

KEEP OFF THE GRASS!

"I'll keep off all I can!" he exclaimed.

And he fell to and ate it off.—Chicago Tribune.

A New Way to Pay Old Debts.

I'm a debtor to my doctor,

So my bill should canceled be,

For in that way I'm a Dr.

To my Dr., don't you see? —New York Sunday World.

Her Dear Friends.

Maud—Ethel Garlington married? Well, well! She is one of the last women in the world I ever expected to see struck by matrimonial lightning.

Irene—She wouldn't have been only she married a conductor.—Chicago Tribune.

His Classification.

After the ball all over the links, Where gold is the prince of the fads, The hobo looks on and smiles as he thinks

That the caddies run after the cads! —Chicago Record.
