The Poet-Priest of the South.

FATHER RYAN DIES OF HEART DISEASE IN LOUISVILLE.

Father Abraham J. Ryan, "poet-priest of the south," died in Louisville, Ky., on the night of the 22nd inst., at St. Bonifacius's church. He was in the care of Father Ubaldus Webersinke and his assistants. Father Ryan went there about a month ago, with his friend, Father McCailion. After about a week he was taken with a fever, of which little was thought. Medical aid was summoned, but a week ago he began to grow worse. He had been in a state of almost incessant mental activity, talking wildly of his new book, "The life of Christ," at intervals preaching to an imaginary audience, and again telling over his adventures during the war and stories of the "lost cause." He was in a comatose condition all day, and it was almost impossible to rouse him. His illness was organic disease of the heart, accompanied by lack of a sufficient supply of blood. Father Ryan was born in Virginia, in 1840. He was educated as a priest. The war breaking out just as he was of age, he followed its fortunes in a sacedotal capacity. At the close of the war he was for a time at Nashville, and later at Clarksville. For a number of years he was at Biloxi, Miss., near Beauvoir, the retreat of Jefferson Davis, and there became more closely the friend of the ex-president of the confederacy. In 1883 he was for a time at Boston college and at Montreal, and later made a lecture tour of the northern states. He is best known as a welcome contributor to Irish and Catholic periodicals and as the author of a volume of poetry, written "always in a hurry," he says in the preface, and collected only upon the urgent request of a young lawyer friend, who took the risk and shares the profits of publishing.

Met Their Death in a Shanty.

HORRIBLE FATE OF SIX ITALIAN LABORERS AT MT. ALTON, PA., HEMMED IN BY A FALLING BUILDING AND ROASTED ALIVE.

Thirty Italian laborers in the employ of the Erie railroad, have occuped one of the company's construction shanties at Mt. Alton, 15 miles south of Bradford, Pa. The building has been in disuie for some time, and the wooden underpinning was weak. Twenty men slept in a little loft and the remainder on the first floor, which was elevated above the ground four feet. During the night one of the posts on which the structure rested gave way, and at one o'clock in the morning the shanty slipped off and collapsed. The men were thrown into a heap, and those who escaped made their way out with great difficulty. In a few minutes the wreck took fire from a lantern that hung in the room, and the walls being largely composed of tarred paper, blazed fiercely. The shouts of those who had escaped, and the screams of others, who were pinned in the blazing pile, aroused the village. There being no fire department, nothing could be done outside of forming a bucket brigade, which was not of the slightest use. The howling of the roasting people grew fainter and fainter, and in a short time the fire had spent itself. Six charred corpses, which could be indentified only by bits of clothing, were taken out. Two men suffered serious injury from being struck by falling timber, but it is believed they will recover. The dead men had sums ranging from $100 to $300 about their persons, which they were about to send to their families in Italy. The Italians had been living in box cars, but chose the building against the advice of those who had pronounced it unsafe.

Another Fish Story.

A Panama dispatch says that the British ship Alexander Yeats, Captain Dunham, from Lobos for Falmouth, while leaving her anchorage struck heavily upon a shoal and commenced to make water. It was some time before the pumps would suck, but they were got in working order and were gaining on the leak when the influx of water suddenly stopped. The vessel put into Callao for examination, and the diver found that a large hole had been knocked in her bottom. In the hole and completely filling it was the body of a very large fish. It is supposed that the fish while swimming past the vessel was carried in by the water rushing through the leaks. At all events the fish saved the vessel and her cargo of 2000 tons of guano, which is now being discharged. The ship will be docked for repairs. The Alexander Yeats belongs to St. John, N. B., and her captain to Digby, N. S.
