Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

In spite of modern changes many of the old general stores still flourish inthe Garden of the Gulf.

Satisfied with things as they used to be they carry on and seek the competition from large flashy up-to-date stores of Charlottetown and Summerside.

Changes have been few in some of these old stores which operated in the horse and buggy days. Electric lights have in many cases replaced the kerosene lamp and the stock of supplies doesn't cover just about everything from "an anchor to a needle" as it formerly did. The cracker barrel and pot-bellied stove are no longer to be seen but their owners still roll out the molasses puncheon and somehow manage to make the slow moving fliud go down the necks of jars and jug with small throats.

And most of the country stores open early and shut late, making it necessary for the bosses and help to be on duty long hours. The custom of staying open so many hours is a hand down from pioneer days when settlers used to drop in to do a little buying and a lot of talking. Some day this custom will go out of practice like snuff and derby hats, but that time is not yet. Meanwhile the old-fashioned general store will continue to serve Island folk in the same old-fashioned manner.

Travel in safety with your children by getting the new metal platform which levels the rear seat of your autombile. Not only does it confine the kiddies like a play pen, but it can be adjusted in width so that an adult can ride in the back seat and still leave room for the little ones to ride in comfort.

The little passenger can't tumble to the floor since the area is level from door to door. What is still better a small child can lie down and sleep in perfect comport, without anyone having to hold him.

Women's Institute Executive Meets

A meeting was held by the Executive of the Prince Edward Island Women's Institute, Saturday, November 15, at their restroom, Charlottetown, with a ful attendance of members.

As a means of further advancing the work of the Prince Edward Island Women's Institute, Leadership Courses will be held at Summerside, Charlottetown, and Souris.

Mr. J. L. Dewar was welcomed to speak on Farm Forums. He said Women's Institutes are missing something that could be beneficial to their program, to themselves, and to their community. Forums will reach the goal they should attain only when the women take an interest and attend as well as the men. Getting together is one way of solving community problems.

The programs for the coming county leadership courses were reviewed, comprising proper procedure in conducting Institute meetings, panel discussions, handicraft instruction, discussion on Institute projects, programs, recreation, etc. and promise to be very interesting.

A discussion of the publicity for the coming of the second Audubon Screen Tour was held concerning advertising, etc. The first presentation of this show was much appreciated by all who attended.

Correspondence including matters pretaining to A.C.W.W. and F. W. I. C. were read and discussed.

KINGSTON W.M.S.

The November meeting of Kingston United W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. James Jewell.

Mrs. Merrell Green led the devotional period with the theme, "The Book of Life". Hymn 183, verses 1-5, was read in unison, followed by hymn 498, "More Love to Thee" and Scripture reading by Mrs. Bert Willis and Mrs. Lloyd McKinnon. Christian Stewardship was read by Mrs. Owen Younker and Mrs. Edgar Newson

Minutes of the last meeting were read, and roll call was answered by 16 members with a verse of Scripture. Plans were made for a pantry sale.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Wilbur Younker, when the leader will be Mrs. Lorne Smith and the lunch committee, Mrs. Heber Barrett, Mrs. Lyman Newson and Mrs. Alton Newman.

The meeting closed with hymn 187, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. Lunch was served by the hostess and committee in charge.

Cpl. G. C. DenHollander, R.C.E., returned to Halifax today after spending the week-end with his family in the city. Mrs. DenHollander and their youngest children, Nellie and Hendrick, leave this week for Timberley, N. S., where they will reside during the winter.

SAD NEWS RECEIVED — Mrs Albert Dewar, Brudenell, received the sad news yesterday that her son Elvin, a locomotive engineer with the C. P. R., working out of Moose Jaw, Sask., had died suddenly Sunday morning. Mr. Dewar had just completed his run and was returning to his home when he became suddenly ill and expired almost at once. He left the Island about 35 years ago but made frequent visits to his mother, the last being during the past summer. Mr. Dewar, who was unmarried, leaves besides his mother, a brother James who lives with his mother at the Mill, Brudenell, and William a farmer in the same area. Three sisters also survive, Lillian in the office of T. G. Ives, city, Jessie in Boston and Mrs. Carl Stewart, Montague. The remains are being forwarded home for burial.

KEEP THESE IN MIND!

Some of the early signs of cancer are:

A lump in the breast.
Unnatural bleeding from a body opening.

A sore that does not heal, particularly of the skin, face, mouth or lips.

Any persistent change in bowel habits — such as diarrhoea or constipation.

Many Canadians are enjoying life today because they found that early cancer can be cured.

Keep these danger signals in mind and see your doctor if one appears.

Seven Days A Week

(By Anne Shannon)

1. Monday: Wash-day is usually a busy time for mothers and for preschool age kiddies its something they look upon as a necessary evil! Why?—well, because Mom is usually so busy that they get scant attention. Plan beforehand to have lots of odds and ends around to amuse youngsters while the week-wash is being done. Keep in a large box a lot of articles such as these—nests of tin cans, these can be made from cans of different sizes from baby food up. (Make sure your can opener does a perfect job when opening the cans). Large size wooden spools may be made into wheels for wagons (typewriter spools adapt themselves nicely to this idea). Smaller spools make "spool men" when threaded on strong cord; milk bottle tops also make wheels when fastened with a paper fastener with a head and two prongs, paper plates may be colored for wall pictures for a doll house. Macarroni, tinted with vegetable dye makes fine necklaces and bracelets when strung with thread and blunt needle. For a very small child a rattle can be made by putting buttons in a baking powder can and sealing it. The good old stand-by, wooden boxes, can provide many happy hours of amusement. Paint them to use as store counters, or shelves for toys. Four boxes, the kind known as butter boxes can be stacked to form a two-storey doll house. Fruit baskets can be made into attractive cradles if you move the handle over to the end or put spool legs on one and use it as a doll-bed. Remember busy children are never mischievous, give them encouragement and a bit of help occasionally and do insist they put every thing away in the box or cupboard when play time is over. Don't say "My child has nothing to play with, poor dear." Get busy—your pantry is full of interesting boxes and so on just waiting for small hands to use.

• • •

2. Tuesday: In the Household Hint Department are these items: After frying fish or onions sprinkle some oatmeal in the pan and shake it over a flame until the meal begins to scorch. Wash in warm soap suds, rinse in hot water, and the pan will be odorless. When you have to crush a pill for a sick child or an adult, place the pill between two spoons fitted together, then press them together hard. The crushed pill will be all in the spoon and none will be lost this way.

• • •

3. Wednesday: Reading about Young Canada's Book Week in all newspapers recently made me realize more than ever that reading is like brushing one's teeth—good habits should be started in infancy. Our own four year old loves books, and is always on the alert for someone to "read me a story, please." You may be alone, but you will never be lonely when you have good reading material at hand. Begin with the colored picture books, then books with piccures and short sentences and then little by little progress to the Little Black Sambo kind. Thornton Burgess' stories are lovely—for they are informative and so very interesting to all ages. (In fact, I know one person, over seventy, who follows "Burgess' Bedtime Stories daily in The Guardian.") Then there are other books, which arouse intellectual curiosity and are a good example of education for the "chocolate-covered" type. Seabird by Clancy Holling and Tree in the Trail, are an example of what I mean. Poetry, too, should be a part of everyone's daily life. Under The Tent of The Sky is one book of poetry which should be in every house, I think. Yes, there are all sorts of books for all ages of children and it is a pity to deprive them of the chance to wander through unknown countries and meet all sorts of people—real and make-believe.

• • •

4. Thursday:
Behind "Slow Down, Men Working" signs
There nearly always lurk
One boss, three foremen, and at least
One honest man that does the work!

• • •

5. Friday: Make a batch of your best pastry. If you think your best pastry isn't anything to write home about, then use a pastry mix —(Like George Formby's song, "You Can't Go Wrong On These.") Roll the pastry thin and cut into three inch squares. Wrap each square around a sardine touched with lemon juice. Bake in a hot oven, 400° F until lightly browned —Tuna buns are another good Friday dish— you mix together 1/4 cup gherkins chopped, 3 hard cooked eggs, chopped 1 can tuna, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1/4 cup grated cheddar cheese and enough mayonnaise to make the mixture spread easily. Spread on buttered halves of hamburger buns. Bake in an oven 350° F eight to ten minutes—that's it.

• • •

6. Saturday: It just wouldn't be Christmas without fruit cakes would it? Nothing makes a nicer gift either than a rich lusious fruit cake. Now is the time to bake them too. In fact smart housewives (I'm not in that class sad to say!) have their fruit cake baked already—Baking them now improves the flavor for the fruits become blended and they become moist and perfect in texture—White fruit cake of this type is always favorite and it keeps good too—One cup granulated sugar, 1/2 cup shortening, 3 eggs, well beaten, 1 table spoon grated lemon rind, 2 table spoons grated orange rind, 2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour, 1/2 table spoon salt, 1 tabfe spoon baking powder, 1 1/2 cups chopped seeded raisins, 1 cup chopped walnuts, 1/2 cup cut up candied cherries, 1/2 cup cut up candied pineapple, 1/2 cup chopped citron, 1/4 cup orange juice. Cream sugar and shortening together until light and fluffy. Add well-beaten eggs and mix thoroughly. Add lemon and orange rinds and stir until mixed. Sift flour, measure and sift again with baking powder and salt. Set aside half a cup of the flour mixture to dredge the combined raisins, cherries, walnuts, pineapple and citron. Add the remaining flour mixture alternately with orange juice, to the shortening mixture, adding only a small amount at a time and blending well after each addition. Add the raisin and fruit mixture and mix well. Pour into a greased and floured loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven of 325° F for one and one half hours or until done—Hope you like this recipe. It always turns out nicely I find—They say, it will keep well, but I have never found out if it would or not. How can I?—with nine "fruit cake lovers" at our house!

• • •

7. Sunday: All done for this week Everything ship-shape and ready for a day of peace and quiet —(Well not so quiet, usually, at this house!) This day will go by, as all days do, and what will you have accomplished towards the betterment of your spiritual life? Church sometime during the day, for us all, I hope and then we will know what contentment really means!

I think that I must have a very common soul.
I find such keen delight in common things...
Majestic souls would choose an eagle's flight
But I—a little sleeping sparrow's folded wings.
I'm never one to choose the ancient tapestry
If I can have the needle work of one
Small pair of awkward hands—a little grubby, but
Twice dear when love's the reason why its done!

The words aren't mine, but the sentiments are—Bye now, may you have the best of week-ends and remember the Slovenian proverb—"Pray to God for a good harvest, but continue to hoe with all your might!"

Thoughts For Our Time

TRUE CANADIAN PATRIOTISM

Today our modern world is reaping a harvest of international turmoil and confusion, war and uneasiness because of a phenomenon largely of nineteenth century origin, which we call nationalism. This feature of the modern state has grown to exaggerated forms and has become nothing more than collective secularism. God and His laws have been ousted from their rightful place in the family of nations and without His Fatherhood, the brotherhood of man has become merely an empty cliche.

Imperialst expansion, economic domination and open war have been practised without scruple and everything has been justified on the grounds of national expediency. Even today, although Communism claims to preach an international doctrine, it takes very little insight to see that it is nothing more than an artful form of world domination by the Russian State. Modern propagandists have lulled the collective consciences of nations to make them bel'eve that there is nothing immoral which fosters the good of the amoral state.

On the other hand, true Christian patriotism is a virtue. It is that virtue which inclines a citizen to love his country, to honor and obey civil authorities, to defend it even with his life against unjust aggression, but ever and always, without prejudice to the rights of other nations. We can be quite truly patriotic, without being of necessity nationalistic. We can love and honor our country and at the same time respect the rights, language and culture of our neighbors.

A good test that our patriotism is sincere and not overstepping the bounds of charity is the absence on our part of criticism and unfavorable comparisons of other countries. On the other hand, if we believe there is no good in other peoples or nations, that our country alone is worthwhile, then we may well suspect that we are guilty of this extreme nationalism for which the world is paying so dearly. Then we are guilty of collective pride and pride is one of the seven deadly sins. We are like the Pharisee who "thanked God that he was not as the rest of men."

• • •

No Super Race

The same principles may be applied to the question of race.—There is no "super race."—All men have been created by God with immortal souls and destined for a supernatural reward, and all, no matter what race or color, deserve the respect of their God-given rights. There is absolutely no moral justification for racial prejudice, just as there is no justification for extreme nationalism.

One of the last commands of Jesus Christ to His Apostles was to "go and teach all nations." He excepted no one from His Divine teachings on racial or nationalistic grounds, and no race nor country is therefore exempt from His commandments. He included also the family of nations in this bond of fraternal charity. When He commanded us not to steal, He did not mean that one nation could be unjust in its dealings with another. When He commanded us not to kill, He did not mean that one nation could slaughter the innocent to attain its selfish ends.

Without God, we will seek in vain for a solution to international difficulties. We may multiply arbitration committees, institute boards of discussions, or establish an international police force, but we will never achieve world peace until the nations of the earth restore God and His Commandments as the basis for international relations; until they replace extreme nationalism by true Christian patriotism, until Christian charity finds once more its rightful place in the world.

• • •

Need True Charity

Nor are we as individuals impotent to do anything about this restoration. Even in our democratic countries, where we uphold the rights of man, there are often too many examples of prejudice and intolerance on racial or nationalistic grounds. Let us remember that nations are made up of individuals, and that international social justice can never be a reality until true Christian charity is practised in the lives of the individual members of the family of nations.

Today, we are striving to uphold our democratic way of life as a model to the oppressed peoples of the world, who are living in a society wherein the dignity of man has been subordinated to the almighty state. How much force does our argument lose if our enemies can mockingly point out the contradiction between doctrine and practice because of repeated incidents of prejudice and intolerance which are motivated solely through a feeling of superiority.

The human being is a creature of Almighty God, created to His image in his immortal soul and destined for a supernatural end. It is for that reason and that reason alone that his rights must be respected. If we do not respect these in any one of our fellow men, then we are simply not fulfilling the law, for the human being is essentially the same in every person on this earth. Our love for our neighbor is a tangible proof of our love for God, for as St. John tells us: "He that loveth not his brother whom he seeth, how can he love God Whom he seeth not?"

(John 1, iv. 20)

Ford - Jewell Wedding

A wedding of interest to P. E. Islanders took place on Thursday, November 6, at 8.00 p. m., at a candlelight service, when Miss Frances E. Jewell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Jewell, R. D., Canajoharie, New York, and Mr. Robert H. Ford, son of Mr. William Ford and the late Mrs. Ford, Sprakers, New York, were united in marriage in the Marshville Evangelical Church, Marshville, New York. Rev. Albert Shilke performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of white nylon marquisette over satin with chantilly lace bodice and sleeves trimmed with rhinestones and bugle beads. The very full skirt with inserts of lace extended into a long train. Her imported silk illusion finger-tip veil with lace appliques was attached to a tiara of orange blossoms. Her bridal bouquet was of white pom-poms and mums centered with a white orchid.

Miss Irma Jewell, maid of honour for her sister, wore an aqua taffeta gown with ilusion neckline and puffed sleeves. Her headpiece of aqua nylon net was attached to a crown of nylon net flowers.

Best man for his brother was Mr. William Ford, Jr., and the ushers were Mr. Veto Pezzella, brother-in-law of the groom, and William Mowey, Jr., brother-in-law of the bride.

The organist, Mrs. Edward Retallick, rendered the traditional wedding music, and Mrs. Dorothy Morrison sang "At Dawning" and "Because". The church was decorated with white pom-poms and mums.

The bride's mother was attired in a grey taffeta dress with a corsage of red roses and matching accessories.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church parlors, which were beautifully decorated with white and varied colored mums and pom-poms. When Mr. and Mrs. Ford left on their wedding trip to Western New York and Canada, the new matron was dressed in a blue suit with blue accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. Ford is a graduate of Canajoharie Central School and is employed as a stenographer in the office of Arkell and Smiths, Canajoharie. Mr. Ford attended Canojoharie Central School and at present holds the rank of MM3-C in the U. S. Navy on the USS Lindenwald.

The bride is a granddaughter of Mrs. John Jewell, Sr., and the late Mr. Jewell, North River.
