High priest for certain types of scoundrel metal was made that it is profitable, it was said. Some time during Monday night George Vickerson's grocery store on Upper Hillsboro Street was forcibly entered and a quantity of cigarettes, soap, tea and other goods stolen. General Tells Of Boy Pranks

LONDON, July 4.—(CP)—General Sir Ian Hamilton, newly commander of the British forces at Gallipoli, has celebrated his 86th year by writing his early recollections, "When I Was a Boy."

"When I was a boy," got a kick out of his book because he was allowed a free rein. Every single person, he writes, who has handled his memoirs has been amazed at the amount of mischief he got up to. He was a "wild" boy, he writes, and his habit of running a pet through his fingers has been a threat to his life as a lodging-house caretaker.

Critics say the book will help readers understand the touches of humor which occasionally brighten his recollections, which some so foolishly think should have no part in the make-up of a soldier. Here are two of his early memories: Piercing the Duke of Cambridge, commander-in-chief of the Army, who took him for a pretty little girl.

Urges Canada Take Over In Newfoundland

(By The Canadian Press) TORONTO, July 3.—Sir Richard Squires, former Premier of Newfoundland, today expressed puzzlement why Canada "has not extended her claim by the acquisition of Newfoundland and Labrador in the Canadian confederacy so that the British North America Act might be entire."

A close constitutional connection would consolidate intimate relations already in existence. "We know Canada. We have the same churches, fraternal organizations and clubs. Our lawyers, doctors and clergymen are nearly all trained in Canada."

Sir Richard argued that officials of the present commission of government had been trained in British possessions other than Canada, and so perhaps were not entirely conversant with Newfoundland characteristics. A Downing Street had plenty to do elsewhere.

"It is a wonderful opportunity for Canada to step in and take over," he said. Newfoundland could take the initiative but it was really up to Canada.

Beat King John On Town's Fair

AMERSHAM, England, July 4.—(CP)—Two doughty farmers have assured the fair of this sleepy Chiltern town will be kept alive.

King John proclaimed that if the fair for its 100th anniversary was revived. In the last few years, interest has fallen off, but John Roberts of Greenley and John Cope of Holmer Green have met annually at the Green and exchanged help.

When they arrived again this year they were greeted by a delegation of farmers who promised them full support next year.

ed to do much to remove them the witness said. They "wore off." Const. Lawrence McInnis told of arresting Amund Gallant as he left the premises of a McGillougan family adjoining the LeClair home. The arrest was made on the night of December 28. The witness told his attention was drawn to the bluish green color of Gallant's left hand which was "very noticeable." Similar stains were on the forehead and near the hairline, Const. McInnis said.

He went to the LeClair and McGillougan homes that night accompanied by Constable Lund of the city police and members of the Mounted Police.

John S. Waugh, telephone employee, described to the jury as assistant wire chief and he had been instructed by his boss, Gordon Starratt on the evening of December 28 to connect phones 465 in the Mounted Police barracks, 282 Cornwall Street, with residence with 523 the phone at D. J. Riley's private residence, 465 and 392 were connected to the Riley phone as extensions, the witness said. When 523 was called the other two phones would ring and conversations between an outside number and 523 could be heard by anyone listening on the extension phones.

The connections mentioned by the witness were made a minute or two before seven o'clock in the evening and remained until just before ten o'clock that night.

Miss Ruby Harper supervisor of telephone operators at Charlottetown told the court she had been instructed on the evening of December 28 it would be "all right" to tell what number was calling 523 if anyone from 1105, a phone at the Mounted Police barracks, should ask.

The Mounted Police phone 1105 called twice to ask who was calling 523, the witness said. First time Binns later that had called and the second time it was 1331 Alex LeClair's phone which called.

Sub-inspector N. J. Anderson chief of investigating by the Riley office and of being unable to locate fingerprints anywhere.

Continuing his evidence the Inspector told of preparing the five ten-dollar bills with malachite green and of taking the serial numbers.

He too, of listening on the evening of December 28 to conversations between Mr. Riley and an unknown party over the 465 phone in the Mounted Police barracks.

Mr. J. J. Johnston, counsel for the accused objected to having evidence between a second and third party, which the witness said was prepared to say was the accused, included in the evidence. Mr. Johnston described it as "hearsay of the strongest character." The conversations were not included.

Says Roosevelt

The same unknown party called Mr. Riley on two occasions on the night of December 28, the witness said.

Inspector Anderson was still being examined by the Crown when court adjourned shortly after five o'clock.

Now Proposing U. S. Minister

CANBERRA, Australia, July 4.—(CP)—The Federal Government is expected soon to implement its proposal to establish an Australian legation in Washington. It is believed preliminary steps were settled by Stanley Bruce, Australian high commissioner to the United Kingdom, in consultation with State Department officials on his recent visit to Washington.

All that now remains to be done, according to political circles, is to finalize policy, select a representative to choose a legation site. Meanwhile, it is wondered here whether the United States will reciprocate and establish her own legation in Canberra. Just now she is reported to be in a quandary.

Similarly, Japan, where an Australian legation is also likely to be established, might accredit a minister to Canberra. She has already welcomed warmly the suggested Japanese legation in Australia, and to promote a better understanding between the two countries, is establishing two instead of one, consulate in Australia.
