with that song; but he felt that he had never vocalised it more equisitely; never thrown so much genuine feeling into the thing. To test himself, he ceased for a moment, and Marcia lifted her head a little. "Don't stop," she said simply, "I think it is very wonderful."

Address and Presentation

On October 28th a large circle of friends and neighbors of Cornwall and vicinity gathered at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Lowther to bid farewell to their esteemed and respected neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stone and daughter, Norma, who are leaving shortly to make their new home in Charlottetown.

Bus Driver Gets 30 Day Sentence

FREDERICTON, Nov. 26—(CP)—Clair Spicer, driver of a Sunny Brae bus, was sentenced Tuesday by Magistrate Walter Limerick to 30 days for drunken driving. The charge resulted from an accident Nov. 2 when the bus, carrying a Mount Allison University soccer team, left the highway near Fredericton.

that tunnel, another Mouse came along. This was a much older Mouse, one whose acquaintance he had already made. "What a dreadful thing to have happen," squeaked Mite. "The other Mouse stared at him. 'What dreadful thing are you talking about?'" he asked.

say, the best of everything for your future days.

Signed on behalf of your friends in Cornwall Meadow Bank North River and York Point Cornwall, P. E. I. October 28, 1952.

Dear Norma:—

When we heard that you would soon be leaving Cornwall and making new school friends we felt we could not let you go without letting you know how much we shall miss you.

dreadful stuff. Nothing was as it had been, and of course as he thought it ought to be. At first he did nothing. But a wide awake Meadow Mouse can do nothing for very long. After a while he ventured to push his head into that light snow, and discovered without too much work, he could dig and push it aside. So he dug through it, making a little tunnel along that short path. And when he came to where this joined one of the main Mouse runways, he found that that was already a tunnel. Other Mice had been along there. While he waited, trying to make up his mind whether to venture out in izing your in-laws. Perhaps the girl you accuse is a trouble-maker as you claim; in time she would get that idea across by herself. Now, she is elevated to the position of a wrongl yaccused innocent with an aura of martyrdom around her. That's a tough achievement for you to overcome.

Try to see your sister-in-law's position. It would be very embarrassing, to say the least, for her to accuse her own guest of being a thief. Any hostess would shy away from such a situation. It would have been much kinder of you to appreciate her position instead of taking matters into your own hands. Taking your hostess aside and telling her what had happened, instead of accusing her, would have been more diplomatic. If your sister-in-law refused to go further with the accusation, your best bet was to drop the case.

Now you are involved in a set of cross purposes, correspondence here and there and a few upset households—just because you wouldn't give up. You realize you are now the underdog, hence your appeal for help.

There is nothing you can do now about getting your money returned (if there ever was any way it could have been done), so let that matter finally drop; it's been pushed around long enough. Have your husband go visit his sister. After all, she is as convinced of her guest's innocence as you are of the girl's guilt. Since you seem to have a high regard for your sister-in-law, aside from this unpleasantness, try to resume a friendly relationship through your husband.

A farvid avowal to "stick up for your own rights" is basically a wonderful thing, but there are times when it is best to go a little easy with it. Giving way is often the better course.

DEAR MISS DIX: A good friend is going into service and I'd like to know if it would be proper for me to give him an identification bracelet. We haven't gone steady, but have had many dates and I like him very much. Should I consult his mother as to whether or not someone else has the same idea?

JEANIE

ANSWER: Perhaps you don't realize that identification bracelets are rather expensive for a high-school junior's budget.

Since you are sufficiently well acquainted with the boy's mother to consult her on the matter, do so and act on her advice. It is quite probable that she will want to give the bracelet to her son, in which case she will probably suggest something else for your gift.

DEAR MISS DIX: Do you think it would be proper for me to have a formal church wedding? The man I plan to marry has been married before and has two children. I have always dreamed of such a wedding and would like so much to have one.

T. T.

ANSWER: It is the marital status of the bride-to-be that dictates the formality of a wedding so, since this is your first trip to the altar, you are entitled to all the pomp and circumstance you crave. Good luck.
