Liberals Slipping Says Doug Fisher

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN
OTTAWA—Liberals' fortunes have declined while those of the opposition are improving, in the opinion of Doug Fisher, editor of the controversial New Democratic member of parliament for Port Arthur. In an Ottawa interview, Mr. Fisher claimed that the unexpected improvement in the Canadian government has bolstered the election chances of the Diefenbaker government.

"The initiative that was with the opposition for the early part of the session has waned in the past few weeks," Mr. Fisher believes. "The refusal of Port Arthur. In an Ottawa interview, Mr. Fisher claimed that the unexpected improvement in the Canadian government has bolstered the election chances of the Diefenbaker government."

"Our own party reached rock-bottom in November, with no momentum and organization at a low ebb and with little money and wavering labor support," the Port Arthur MP admitted. "Since then we have been making some recovery, especially since Mr. Douglas took his seat in the Commons at leader. He still remains the most attractive politician in Canada."

Mr. Fisher denied that there was any rift in the NDP between himself and David Lewis, one of the party's brighter new stars. He also denied rumors that some members of the party might follow the example of Hazen Argue and bolt to the Liberals.

"Our chief problem has been that we are the fourth party in the house, and Real Couette

LOW CALIBRE

He said he is surprised at the generally low calibre of most of the new Liberal MPs who were elected on June 18, naming five or six which he suggested have shown some ability in parliament.
