Anger At Americans Unites Squabbling Ceylon Leftists

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

COLOMBO (AP)—Under the impetus of an American action, the squabbling, left-wing political parties of Ceylon have united.

Last February, the United States cut off economic aid to Ceylon. Anger toward Washington brought together Communists and other Marxists, leading to formation a week ago of the United Left Front.

Preachings of leftist leaders had encouraged socialist trends within the Commonwealth government of the world's only woman prime minister, Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike.

U.S. aid was halted because the government seized 181 service stations from Western oil companies and dragged its feet on paying compensation.

Now a unified left has a better—but still obscure—chance of capturing power to carry out more extreme nationalization plans and possibly orient neutralist Ceylon toward the Communist world.

PEOPLE RELAXED

Most of the 10,600,000 people of Ceylon, an island just off the southern tip of India, spend little time thinking of anyone capturing power. The atmosphere is too relaxed, in a tropical climate that grows anything and requires few clothes. But in Colombo, a modern port city, a sense of politics is strong and confused.

A new possibility is that UF might draw enough support from Mrs. Bandaranaike's Freedom party to win an election expected in 1965 or at least dictate coalition terms.

After gaining independence from Britain in 1948, Ceylon was governed until 1956 by the right-wing, Westernized United National Party. S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike led a ballot box revolt of rural elements among Ceylon's majority group, the Sinhalese Buddhists, and was prime minister from 1956 until his assassination in 1959.

The government of his widow has lacked strong direction. It encompasses elements from the conservative right to such leftists as Tikiri Banda Illangaratne, who ordered seizure of the service stations.

Dissatisfaction with the government caused growth in the strength of the right-wing UNP.

By early this year, the UNP had frightened left-wing parties into self-examination. One is the Communist party, its parliamentary leadership looks to Moscow but its trade union leaders admire Peking.

Another is a Trotskyite party. Its parliamentary leaders seem to have renounced Trotsky's preachings of perpetual revolution in favor of the ballot box but, again, some elements in the party look to Peking.

Third is the revolutionary Socialist party headed by Philip Gunawardene who learned his Marxism in the United States.

UNITED BY CUTOFF

Leaders of all three left-wing parties say they were moving toward unity but the cutoff of American aid spurred them.

As commerce minister, Illangaratne established a government company to sell petroleum in competition with Shell, Esso and Caltex. He nationalized a quarter of their best service stations to get his company going last year.

Washington halted $1,300,000 in grants and $3,000,000 in loans for 1963 when Ceylon didn't pay for the facilities.

Other trouble is brewing.

Civil disobedience is being threatened by a minority that speaks Tamil against a law making Sinhalese the only government language after the first of next year.

And there is continuing economic trouble. The leftists' solution has been to nationalize foreign investments. Illangaratne has stolen some of that thunder.

TAPE RECORDER IS NEW WEAPON

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) California highway patrolmen say they have come up with a new weapon against drivers who drink and later tell a judge they are not guilty.

It's a tape recorder.

Officers record the suspected driver's voice at the scene of the arrest while the suspect is being given a sobriety test.

Most suspects later listen to their own slurry voices on the tape and then throw in the towel, says Highway Patrol Sgt. James C. Dukes.

"In fact," Dukes says, "I can't recall a single not guilty plea from anyone who's been confronted with these recordings."

Some drivers who have had one too many for the road are even pleased at being recorded, Dukes said. "Some even want to hold the microphone themselves."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X E is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♥	Dble.	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead—five of hearts.

Let's say you're declarer at three notrump and West leads a heart. The problem is to play the hand so as to give yourself the best chance to make the contract.

This is by no means an easy proposition, even if you look at the East-West cards, but it's naturally much harder if you don't see them.

As declarer, you're not completely in the dark, since there are some things you already know about West's hand. The chances are he has all the high cards that are missing, since he opened the bidding. He also is likely to have a five- card (or longer) heart suit and he apparently does not have the K-J-10, having failed to lead the jack.

This knowledge can be put to work in a most unusual way to make the contract. The first thing to do is go up with the ace of hearts, even though you know you could win the trick more cheaply in your own hand. The next thing is to force out one of West's aces, say, by playing a dismond to the king.

West takes the ace and returns a low heart, East playing the ten. Out of the goodness of your heart, you let East win the ten. Of course, there is method to this madness because, regardless of what East returns, you've got the hand made.

Let's say East returns a diamond. You win it with the queen and now play the queen of clubs. West can take the ace and king of hearts, after which you have nine tricks to show for your efforts.

Note that if you fail to win the opening lead with the ace of hearts you go down. Note also that if you win the ten of hearts at trick three you also go down.

Both plays are absolutely essential to make the contract. Both plays can be justified logically because West's hand, for practical purposes, is an open book from the start, even though his cards are not actually seen.
