Waugh - Wood Wedding

An early fall wedding of quiet charm was solemnized at the United Baptist Church Summerside on Thursday evening September 27th at 6:30 p.m. when Gerda Pearl, daughter of Mrs. James Wood of Collins, N. Y. and the late Mr. Wood, became the bride of Ralph Samuel Waugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Waugh Wilnot Valley.

Rev. E.J. Barriss performed the double ring ceremony, assisted by Rev. W. A. Harper.

The bride, charming in her wedding gown of white satin entered the church on the arm of her uncle Mr. Garfield Wood of Hunter River.

A bridal bouquet of red roses and streamers complemented her wedding ensemble which was fashioned with lace bodice, hooped skirt, chapel length train and lily point sleeves.

Her finger tip veil was held in place by a white satin bonnet. Her ornaments, a gift of the groom were a double strand of pearls and matching earrings.

Miss Audrey Waugh, only sister of the groom, also maid of honour and was gowned in gold nylon taffeta bouffant, with matching mitts and headband with pink roses. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Audrey Maynard, chose turquoise nylon taffeta gown, also in bouffant style and had matching mitts and headband of yellow roses. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and fern.

During the signing of the register Miss Elizabeth Harper sang very sweetly "I'll Walk Beside You."

Mr. Leslie Waugh, brother of the groom, acted as best man and Mr. Claude Waugh, also a brother was usher with Mr. Paul Hansen. The groom's mother was gowned in a black figured jersey dress with matching accessories. Her corsage was of red roses. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Garfield Wood, chose a black print dress with matching accessories and she also wore a corsage of red roses. The bride's mother, who resides in New York, was unable to attend the wedding due to illness.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the groom's home in Wilnot Valley, where 75 guests were entertained and tendered their good wishes for future happiness to the bridal couple.

The bride's table was decorated with a lace tablecloth, vases of mixed flowers and centered with a three tier wedding cake. Rev. E.J. Barriss toasted the bride and was responded to by the groom.

Those assisting with the serving were Mrs. Garfield Wood, Mrs. Archibald MacMurdo, Mrs. Ralph Hoag, Mrs. Lorne Crozier, and Mrs. Robert Waugh. Mrs. Clara Roake poured.

During the evening Mrs. Allan Wedlock, cousin of the bride rendered a vocal solo accompanied by Mrs. Kaye Hansen, who is a cousin of the groom and who acted as organist for the wedding.

A number of well wishes called during the evening to fete the happy young couple who later left on a honeymoon in the Maritimes. They will later motor to Gowanda, N. Y., their future home where Mr. Waugh is in business.

For traveling the bride chose a forest green gabardine suit with grey accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Some Cancers Disappear Before Causing Trouble

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE NEW YORK, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Sometimes people may have a tiny cancer that comes and then goes away without their ever knowing it.

This possibility, a new puzzle in the riddle of cancer, was described yesterday to the annual meeting of the American Cancer Society.

The science sessions are devoted to reports of diagnosing cancer by looking for cancer cells in fluids or gentle scrapings from body organs. This method appears to be one of the best for finding some kinds of cancer when the cancer is still only a tiny spot, confined to one location.

Dr. James W. Reagan of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, told of six women in whom such tiny, early cancers apparently disappeared later with no treatment.

Later the cancers were checked continuously to watch the cancers and start treatment if needed.

The tiny spots were judged to be cancers of the cervix, the neck of the uterus or womb. They were detected by cell smear studies. In some, bits of tissue also were cut from the cervix and judged by an expert pathologist to be cancers.

These cancers were localized—they had not spread elsewhere or invaded nearby tissues were found to be gone, Dr. Reagan said. As long as 17 months later the cancers had not appeared again. How long they may have existed originally before being detected is not known.

These six cases turned up during a study of more than 100 women found to have such tiny cancers of the cervix.

Another mystery is that these

Dorothy Dix Says—

DEAR MISS DIX: I am heartbroken over my boy friend's neglect. He lives sixteen miles from me and though he can't drive a car, I think he might at least write. I am 15, he is a year older, and I know he likes me. LILY H.

ANSWER: A 16-year-old boy with a penchant for letter writing is a fairly indeed. At that age, boys shun pen and ink much as they avoided soap and water six years earlier. You are making entirely too much of your brightened romance. Instead of mooning over an inaccessible boy, why not go out with someone closer to home? If your absent beau really cares for you, eventually he'll write or come calling. Until then, cheer up and stop moping!

ging, because it seemed only childish against his strength. Anger rose and choked her. The fire of the man holding her warmed her cool body, but it fed her anger, not desire.

He released her and stood holding her arms in his strong hands. He held her just below the shoulders and she knew that his fingers would leave bruises. He let her arms go abruptly. She could not see his face; once more the light was behind him. She had the vague notion that if she slapped him he would not be surprised—that he half expected this and knew how to use such a gesture in his own behalf. She said quietly, "Now I'm going to tell you why you did that."

His voice was taunting. "The reason should be fairly obvious to a woman of your experience, little friend."

Her words were each a stone, aimed hard. "Don Juan the triumphant! So you think I know what your life has been in these last years. I know why it's been a succession of conquests. You Don Juans are all alike. In you is great weakness, which you half suspect. You strut. But underneath is the rotten core. As you stand there, you're simple to read, with what I already know of you. Once you wanted to cut yourself loose from money you had not earned. You failed to make that gesture out of fear. After I found you out and left you, you had a bad time. You stumbled onto this opiate, and now you're finished. You're an empty show, put on for yourself. If I didn't understand you I'd despise you."

Sawn made no move, no sound. He was a quiet faceless bulk standing there with the light behind it.

With a world of anticlimax in the sound, the telephone rang. Sh turned and left him.

Albert was on the wire. He sounded very tired. "My battery's gone, I think. I've called a garage, but I can't get a cab. Could you come after me?" "Not yet. Did Leighton sign you up?" "No."

He described his whereabouts. She hung up the receiver thoughtfully. There was nothing she wanted less than an encounter between Albert and Sawn. Sawn was more than apt to be insufferable, and Albert had had a long day.

Sawn was stretched out again on the long cushioned chair. He was smoking a cigaret. The tip of it was a red point of fire against his face, now lighted pallidly by the lantern above his head. He turned his eyes sideways and looked up at her. His posture and the slow movement of his eyes made her think of a sick man.

Buttoning the top of her scarlet jacket she said: "I'm going to pick up my husband. Can I drop you off somewhere?" "Slowly he sat up, staring at her left hand. "I didn't see your wedding ring." He added: "You were listed as Victoria Jason."

"Yes, I've only been married six months." "Sawn stood up. "Who is he?" "His name's Albert Hime."

"Albert Hime," Sawn repeated, and walked toward the balcony wall. "I've got to leave. Get your oap."

He shook his head, looking at the twinkling lights. "I think I should meet your husband. Yes, I've decided that I want to meet your husband." He took a deep puff of his cigaret.

"But I don't want you to."

"That's too bad."

His voice was flat and a little nasty. She knew that the more she argued, the more obdurate he would become. "Suit yourself, then. It really makes no difference to me." She made her own voice as emotionless as his had been.

Moodyly he flipped the cigaret over the balcony wall, watched it arc down into darkness. She got the feeling of a great irresolution in him, and a weariness. As she left him standing there she knew that the elaborate structure which had sustained his ego for many years was lying in ruins at his feet.
