40 Senior Officers Leave Forces

OTTAWA (CP)—Forty senior officers left the armed forces prematurely in the 18 months before the end of August, Defence Minister Hellyer reported here.

The cost of their pensions between retirement and what would have been normal retirement age is $811,011, he said in a Commons return for Douglas Harkness, former Conservative defence minister.

The officers involved are commodores and above in the navy, brigadiers and above in the army and air commodores and above in the air force.

Of the 79 senior officers retired between Jan. 1, 1965 and Aug. 30, 1966, only 39 had reached normal retirment age of 55.

Mr. Hellyer declined to reply directly to Michael Forrestal (PC — Haifax) who asked whether servicemen will be allowed to decide freely whether to join the new unified force or to retire voluntarily without loss of pension.

"Terms and conditions of engagement in the unified forces will be set out in the legislation to be introduced in Parliament to establish a single force, Mr. Hellyer said.

He also told Mr. Forrestall that the percentage of the navy budget spent on capital equipment had risen to an estimated 28.5 per cent in the current fiscal year from 15.9 per cent in 1960-61.

Mr. Hellyer said dismissed Rear-Admiral William Landymore advised him in 1965 and 1966 that there were morale problems in Maritime Command.

"Appropriate remedial action was initiated, he added.

Mr. Hellyer told P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East) that 263 officers resigned in the four-month period from May to August this year. Of the 72 who resigned in July, the month Admiral Landymore was dismissed, 40 were naval officers.

BRISTOL

Anslem Lapierre of Bristol passed away suddenly last week at his home. Mr. Lapierre who was born in Quebec moved to Bristol with his parents Mr. and Mrs? John Lapierre and made his living as a chef working with the government in this trade. Left to mourn his passing are his wife, the former Mary McAdam and three small children along with several brothers and sisters in Quebec.

The brothers and sisters home for the funeral are Hilda, Evelyn, Annabelle and Ella from Montreal and district along with brothers Raymond, Angus and Leo from the Magdalen Islands.

Mrs. Louis Byrne, died last week. The funeral was held Monday morning to the Church of St. Lawrence.

First traffic is slated to cross the new bridge across the Morell River on the 15th of this month after a construction period of nearly a year. This is the fourth bridge to be built across the Morell river.

Mrs. James A. Addie O'Brien who left her home some years ago to reside in the Sacred Heart Home Diety has bid the residents of Bristol good-bye and sold her furniture and closed up shop.

Mrs. Bill Kelly, the former Katie McGrath has entered the provincial home for the elderly in the city owing to her ill health. She has been crippled for a number of years and was taken to the home where she could have professional attention.

The fishing season in Bristol is coming to a close and many of the boats are already taken home where they can be stored and overhauled.
