LONDON, JUNE 2.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MAY 31.

ROYAL PROCLAMATION.

THE order of the day for taking the King's Proclamation into consideration, being read at the table by the Clerk.

The Marquis of Abercorn offered himself to their Lordships attention for the purpose of making a motion. In doing so, his Lordship expressed the utmost satisfaction and confidence that he would be supported by every noble Peer in that house, whose concurrence and approbation could give weight or respectability to the measure. It would seem strange, that at a period when national prosperity and greatness had been so rapidly increasing from a state of almost national bankruptcy to a degree of perfection and consequence, that it might seem to have almost reached its

ACHME, persons should be found so desperate in their situations, and persevering in their treasonable designs of raising disturbances, that it was necessary to step forward to repress their insolence; but it was to be remembered, that there never was a government, however excellent, or a people, however contented and happy, where individuals were not to be found, whose only hope of prosperity consisted in the destruction of all around them—whose only happiness arose from the misery they themselves had occasioned.—Under these circumstances, it was impossible for him not to advert to the late Revolution in a neighbouring kingdom; in doing it, he did not mean to throw any reflection upon that unhappy people, but though he would not insult them, as it might seem by a comparison between our continually rising prosperity and their miserable fallen state, he yet could not avoid holding them up as an awful example, what course we were to pursue, and what errors to avoid. It was also singularly observable, that the whole of the present system of discontent and would be reform, which has manifested itself in this country, whether under the form of seditious pamphlets, industriously circulated into the remotest corner of the kingdom, of clubs, combinations, or associations, all take their date from that inauspicious event—all emanating from that

EDMUND FANNING.

By his Excellency's Command,
THOMAS DESBRISAY, Secretary.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

A Proclamation.

WHEREAS by an Act of Parliament, made and passed in the twenty eighth Year of his Majesty's Reign, intituled "An Act for regulating the Trade between his Majesty's Colonies and the Plantations in North America, and in the West India Islands, and the Countries belonging to the United States of America, and between his Majesty's said Subjects, and the foreign Islands in the West Indies,"

No Goods or Commodities whatever can be imported into the Island of Saint John, except certain Articles therein mentioned, the Importation of which Goods and Commodities, or any of them, may be authorised by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief, with the Advice of his Majesty's Council.

AND WHEREAS it is necessary from public Emergency and to prevent Distress to the Settlers of this Island, that the Importation of the Goods and Commodities as permitted by the aforesaid Act, and herein after mentioned, should be authorised and permitted for a longer Time, for the Supply of the Inhabitants of the Island:

I HAVE THEREFORE THOUGHT FIT, with the Advice and Consent of his Majesty's Council, to publish this Proclamation, authorising and permitting, and I do hereby authorise and permit, the Importation of the following Goods or Commodities into this Island, that is to say, Scantling, Planks, Staves, Heading Boards, Shingles, Hoops, or squared Timber of any Sort, Horses, Neat Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, Poultry, or live

Stock of any Sort, Bread, Bisquit, Flour, Peas, Beans, Potatoes, Rice, by British Subjects, and in British Built Ships, owned by his Majesty's Subjects, and navigated according to Law, for the Space of SIX MONTHS, next ensuing the Date hereof, of which all Persons concerned are required to take Notice.
