diamonds and lost the finesse to the queen. Everything now depended on East's next play. If he had returned a spade, the suit his partner opened, South would have had an easy time making three notrump. Declarer could force out the ace of diamonds and make nine tricks, losing at most, two diamonds and two clubs. But East could see no nourishment in spades. West was marked with the ace of diamonds and hence could not have the ace of spades also, if declarer's bids were to be believed. A spade return would only mark time and allow declarer to develop his tricks. It was necessary to attack declarer elsewhere and the obvious suit was clubs. If West had sufficient heart strength or length to prevent South from taking five heart tricks, the contract was bound to be defeated even though a trick was handed declarer by a club return. Having determined on this defense, the only problem then remained to decide which club to lead. To this question there could be but one answer. East returned the three. Declarer won the club, but was finished. West took the diamond return, led back a club, and South went down one losing three clubs and two diamonds. Had East returned any club but the three, the contract would have been made. South would have had two club stoppers instead of one.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints, each day the code letters are different.
