Couldn't Pass Good Money.
"Talking about money," said a drummer, "I had a curious experience several years ago with a sheet of $5 bills. I had gone to our bank to get some cash for a trip and found the paying teller in the act of cutting apart a lot of new currency just received from Washington. It was in sheets of $100 or 20 notes each, and I prevailed upon him to let me have one just as it was. Next evening I was in a cafe in the first town on my route, and when I went to pay my check I pulled out my new money and asked for a pair of shears. The proprietor stared at me in amazement. 'What is that?' he asked?
"Money, cash, hoodle, long green," I replied. 'Give me the scissors, and I'll cut you off a piece to remember me by.'
"Not much," he said firmly. 'You'll have to work that off on somebody else.'
"Then I tried to explain, but he wouldn't be convinced, and 'pon my word I believe he would have sent for a policeman if I hadn't happened to have some silver in my pocket. It was the same everywhere else. The stuff was universally pronounced counterfeit, and, to tell the truth, it did look spurious seen in that form. I was finally obliged to go to my room and cut the bills apart before I could use them."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Thrifty Damsel.
A spirit of thrift was shown by a young woman who entered a car with sundry boxes and bundles. Another young person came in at the next station and recognized her.
"Oh, my, who is to be married?"
"Nobody, and me last of all."
"Then what are the flowers for?"
"A funeral. Our teacher died, and we girls put together to get this wreath."
"Poor thing! Did she know she was going to die?"
"I don't think so." Then, after a pause, she added cheerfully, "But she does by this time," all being said in a most unconscious way.
"How much was the wreath?"
"Two dollars and sixty cents. I only had two twenty-five."
"Did you pay the difference?"
"Dear, no. I made him give me it for $2, so I saved my own quarter I put in, but I'm going to make the girls think I paid two sixty."
"Well, that's right; the wear and tear is worth a quarter surely."—Observer.

Investigating Grandpa.
A grandfather, well known in the English house of commons, was chatting amicably with his little granddaughter, who was snugly ensconced on his knee.
"What makes your hair so white, grandpa?" the little miss queried.
"I am very old, my dear; I was in the ark," replied his lordship, with a painful disregard of the truth.
"Oh, you are Noah?"
"No."
"Are you Shem, then?"
"No, I am not Shem."
"Are you Ham?"
"No."
"Then," said the little one, who was fast nearing the limit of her Biblical knowledge, "you must be Japhet."
A negative reply was given to this query also, for the old gentleman inwardly wondered what the outcome would be.
"But, grandpa, if you are not Noah or Shem or Ham or Japhet, you must be a beast."—New England Home Magazine.

TANSTEAD JUNCTION, P. Q., 12th Aug. 1893.
MESSRS C C RICHARDS & Co.
GENTLEMEN,—I fell from the bridge leading from a platform to a loaded car while assisting my men in unloading a load of grain. The bridge went down as well as the load on my back, and I struck on the ends of the sleepers, causing a serious injury to my leg. Only for its being very fleshy, would have broken it. In an hour could not walk a step. Commenced using MINARD'S LINIMENT, and the third day went to Montreal on business and got about well by the use of a cane. I can sincerely recommend it as the best liniment that I know of in use.
Yours truly,
C. H. GORDON.
