

BOUND TO DUTY.

Continued.

'My dear John, I would not for worlds have you decide otherwise than you have. Indeed, I would be a thousand times prouder of you in your grave as a brave and noble man than living a sneak and a coward. I know, John, how hard it would be to bear—how I should have to battle to take care of our little darling—but it would be a brighter flower for her to know that her father died as a man that lived scorned and despised by his fellows. Oh John! My dear John! it is like tearing asunder my heart-strings to say so; but go and do your duty. I will pray, John, as I never prayed before, that all will be well; that His mighty arm will guide you through every danger and bring you back safe. But, if you fall, I shall have no shame come to me on your account, and will keep your memory green as that of one who acted his part as a man.'

He drew her still nearer to him, smoothed back the bright hair from the flushed and tearful face, looked long and tenderly at the speaking eyes, kissed her again and again, and answered, in a broken voice:

'May God bless you, brave little woman, for the words. If I die, He will take care of you and our little baby. But—and the sudden fire that kindled within him made the muscles of his arms as iron—but let any skulkers beware how they cross my path or seek to wreck my train! Yes, Mate, my dear little one, I will be careful as never before, and if the cowardly, insane wretches attempt any outrage they will find they have aroused a lion in John Malcolm.'

'Oh Heaven! keep them quiet, and make all upon the road your friends, John.'

'No one who belongs to the road will seek to molest me, Mate. You can depend upon that. It is not railroad men I fear; they have no sympathy with mob law. If left to themselves, though striking for wages for their needs, all would be quiet and orderly. No, it is not they, it is the loafing, miserable, worthless tramps, and the thieves, that would rather steal than work, even when they have a good chance, that have made all the trouble. But I must be going; it is high time I was on my engine. Heaven bless you, and keep your little heart as brave as you have made mine!'

Another kiss—another, and yet another—and he turned sadly away from his loved home to face a combination of danger that well might have appalled one even as brave as he. Discouraged mutterings like the half-smothered thunder of human passions reached his ears as he elbowed his way through the crowd to where the engine already stood puffing and hissing, as if anxious to be off and crush out all opposition beneath its ponderous wheels.

'Going out to-night, John?' asked a friendly voice as he was nearing the depot.

'Yes.'

'Well, good luck, old fellow; but keep a sharp lookout for misplaced switches, and obstructions on the track.'

John Malcolm stopped, drew the sleeve of his shirt quickly over his eyes to clear them of tears that were the very reverse of unmanly, and grasping the hand of his fellow engineer, whispered under his breath:

'If anything should happen to me, if I should be killed, promise me that you and the boys will take good care of my wife and child.'

'I promise—swear it, John, and will keep my word as I know you would do for me. But I wish you wasn't going out. I don't like the way things look.'

'Nor I. But somebody has to go, and it shall never be said that John Malcolm was driven from the road, or forced to back out from running by a lot of miserable thieves and vagabond.'

'One word more, John. Are you armed?'

'No; I never carried a weapon in my life; didn't even think of needing one.'

'Then take mine. Hope you won't have to use it, but it might save your life. Every chamber is loaded.'

With the revolver ready for instant use, John Malcolm hurried forward. The surging an infuriated crowd made little room for him and divined his purpose, and no one had anything particular against him; yet he would be sacrificed as quickly to the wild unreason of the sans culottes, as if he had been their most bitter enemy. He would try to run through a train they had stopped, and that was enough for them.

(Concluded in our next.)

His Excellency the Governor General has signified to the Six Nation Indians, through Major De Winton, his pleasure in becoming patron to the proposed Brant memorial, and in accepting a copy of Stone's "Life of Brant."

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undoubted fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will sell hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.

CATARRE.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy
CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
