Important Decisions Rumored For Steel And Coal In N.S.

By DAL WARRINGTON—HALIFAX (CP)—Important decisions affecting the future of Nova Scotia steel and coal industries may be in the offing but government and industry officials are not saying much. Reports received last week that Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, which dominates both industries in this province, plans a rolling mill at its plant at Contrecoeur, Que., in such a development could affect the operation of its basic steel mill at Sydney, N.S., which gives work to about 3,700 people. Other reports, also unconfirmed, are that the Nova Scotia government is taking a close look at Dosco's plans for its coal mines, which employ about 6,000 Nova Scotians. Dominion Coal Company, the subsidiary that operates most of the mines, reported a serious financial drain at its last annual meeting. Premier Stanfield and Mines Minister Donald Smith of Nova Scotia declined comment Friday on a Sydney report that the government is considering taking over the coal company. However, one source indicated no such step is likely although the question of what to do about the faltering industry is under government discussion. The provincial government's painful experience operating a coal mine at Inverness, N.S., in the 1940s is thought to discourage any new venture into public operation.

Executives in the Dosco head office at Montreal refused comment on either the Contrecoeur expansion or the coal-mine reports. At Toronto a spokesman for Dosco's parent company, Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd., said it does not make sense for the Conservative government of Nova Scotia to "become socialist" and take over a coal company. Nova Scotia coal mining was a problem child and he could not see the government burdening itself with such a project. As for reports that Dosco and the Quebec government have reached agreement on expansion of the Contrecoeur steel mill, he said he knew nothing of it. Quebec government officials and the Hawker Siddeley president, T. J. Emmert, declined to give any information. A clue to what the Nova Scotia government may be thinking is seen in a legislature speech this week by E. A. (Ned) Manson, Conservative member for Cape Breton-West and until recently industry minister in the Stanfield cabinet. He called on Dosco to reveal its plans for the Sydney steel mill which he said are "a mystery to the government of this province." Such knowledge was essential if Nova Scotia was to plan for the future. Said the former industry minister: "I do not think that we can stand by and watch an industry which contributes 15 per cent . . . of the dollar volume of our manufactured products slowly wither and die because of lack of initiative on the part of the owners to expand in this province." He referred to two previous approaches by the province to Dosco offering assistance in expanding facilities at Sydney, both of which were unsuccessful. Instead Dosco decided to proceed with plans for new facilities at Contrecoeur, which is nearer the company's markets in Central Canada.

Federal Gov't Plans More Computer Use

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to turn more problems over to computers to carry out recommendations for improved efficiency by the royal commission on government organization.

Privy Council President McIlraith tabled a report in the Commons outlining plans to carry out commission recommendations.

The commission suggested much routine could be speeded through the hands of government by use of computers. A central bureau for data processing has been set up in Ottawa and will go into operation April 1 with processing of income tax returns as one of its first duties.

However, the new bureau will also serve other government departments. Mr. McIlraith's statement said, and bureau staff will concentrate on exploring new uses for computers and helping existing government users with peak loads and special problems."

The report also urged creation of a management improvement branch to be responsible for initiating policy on administrative procedure and to seek improved efficiency through improvement within departments and co-ordination of inter-departmental communications.

Mr. McIlraith said organization for the management improvement branch has been authorized. An active recruiting program had been started and once sufficient personnel had been brought in activities of the branch would be increased in line with the commission suggestions.

"The results of these surveys have confirmed the general validity of the Glasco recommendations" and specific policies on this aspect would be announced later, the statement said.

The commission headed by J. Grant Glasco, Toronto accountant and business executive, made recommendations that much red tape surrounding hiring staff and spending money be cut away.

Mr. McIlraith said 100 of the recommendations of the Glasco commission, which studied government operations for more than two years, have been accepted to date.

The bidding: South West North East 1♣ Pass 1♦ Pass. 2NT Pass 3NT

Opening lead—jack of spades. Suppose you have the South hand and open with a club. When partner responds a diamond, you are faced with the problem of finding a satisfactory rebid.

If you jump to three clubs, you run the risk of a pass, since such a bid is invitational but not forcing. If you jump to two no-trump instead, you also run the risk that partner may pass or else go on to three, and, in either case, the defenders may run a long heart suit.

These bids are the only ones you can seriously consider, and of the two, the one recommended is two no-trump, risky though it is. In any case, let's say that you bid two no-trump and that partner raises to three. Your troubles are not yet over, even though West leads a spade instead of the heart you feared, because you eventually are defeated if you misplay the hand.

If you win the king of spades with the ace and then play the ace of clubs, which would seem to be the natural thing to do, you go down. There is nothing you can now do to overcome the unlucky 4-4 club break.

But if you make allowance from the start that only a 4-4 club division can defeat the contract, and then take steps to overcome that condition if it exists, you wind up making the hand.

The proper play at trick two is the eight (or nine) of clubs, not the ace. Observe that if you do this, East makes only one club trick, not two. He can win the first club lead, but you later trap his remaining clubs by leading the suit twice from dummy.

It is true that this safety play will not succeed if West has the missing four clubs, but in that case, no other line of play will succeed either. All you can do in bridge is try to exercise command over matters within your
