and then passes beyond. With some things like green beans, peas and corn, this peak is quickly over. One day the vegetables are crisp, tender and sweet. A few days later they begin to get tough. If one plants all the seed at the same time and of the same variety, they that peak is over in a very short time. Even with slower maturing things like carrots, beets and cabbage, the same rule holds true though these things will be high class eating for several weeks. To spread out the harvest we simply spread out the sowings at least two weeks apart from the first thing in the spring until late June or even July in some parts. We read the season still further by using early and late maturing varieties.

Major Groups

Flowers and vegetables arrange themselves in three convenient main planting groups. First come those things which will stand a lot of frost. In fact most of them can be sown just as soon as we can get out on the ground in the spring. In this hardy category are cosmos, snapdragons and sweet peas among the flowers, and lettuce, radish, peas and spinach among the vegetables. Then come the semi-hardy things like petunias, nasturtiums, zinnias among the flowers and beets, cabbage, beans, etc., among the vegetables. Last are the tender plants which a frost does not kill outright will damage them so severely that they will actually lag behind later plantings. Examples are dahlias and gladiolus in flowers and in vegetables melons, cucumbers, corn and the main planting of potatoes. Of course with the vegetables especially we can rush the season a bit. Usually a few rows of corn and potatoes are risked ahead of time. In the seed catalogue, which is an invaluable guide in planting as well as selecting what to plant, the various degrees of hardness will be shown. On most seed packets too, there is some indication of the proper time to plant, in addition to other vital information like soil and sunshine requirements and depth to plant and how far to thin.

Power Saves Labor

Where one has more than the average sized lot, a garden tractor plus possibly a power lawn mower will save a lot of time and hard work. These machines are not expensive and, given a minimum of care, they will last a long time. They will also do the work at least five times faster than by hand. It is a mistake to purchase too large equipment especially in tractors. The smaller types are much more easily handled. Experienced gardeners advise buying more and smaller power units rather than a big heavy tractor with a lot of attachments.
