SKIDDE.—A well-to-do farmer of Lambton, Ont., named Kerly, got a sun-stroke last summer which affected his mind several times during the fall, but as he was harmless nothing was done with him. About 4.30 on the 20th, he and Samuel Mathers went out as usual to feed cattle. Kerly told Mathers that he would not be long in the world. Mathers laughed at him and was told not to laugh but to watch and see. Kerly went to the house, got a butcher's knife and began sharpening it. When Mrs. Kerly tried to get the knife from him she pushed her into another room and followed, closing the door after him. He had struggled for the knife in which Mrs. Kerly put her hand badly cut, but he got hold of it with one hand and turned her back to him and while in that position he forced the knife into his neck just above the collar bone, and down into the chest, about eight inches, where it remained twenty minutes, before anyone was aware of its being there.

MANITOBA ITEMS.—The blizzard of Saturday last has been succeeded by very fine weather.

A man named McFall has been arrested for attempting to blow up a house of ill fame at Pembina. He placed a quantity of gun powder in the chimney, which was discovered in time to prevent an explosion. The motive of the prisoner is not positively known but it is supposed it was done in revenge.

A sudden death occurred on Monday night at the Douglas House, Winnipeg. On March 25th, an English lady named Catherine Grimms, accompanied by her son and daughter, arrived in that city. The son, a week of twenty-three, left for the west last evening with the intention of fanning Mrs. Grimms' intimat-d on several occasions that if placed to go to New York or some other place, as her lands were almost gone. She was an accomplished musician. On the evening of the 25th she played an accompaniment for a song and before she reached the end of the piece she paused and lifted her hand to her head as in contemplation. Her hand dropped lifeless on the key board and she fell forward dead. The deceased was 65 years of age, and her daughter 21.

Human Monsters. AN IRISHMAN'S OUTBURST AGAINST THE DYNAMITE POLICY.

Mr. A. M. Sullivan, late editor of the Dublin Nation, and Member of Parliament for Louth, Ireland, under date of London, England, February 24, has written a letter to the editor of the Irish American of this city concerning the "Dynamite Policy."

Mr. Sullivan says, among other things:—"Even before I visited America I knew fairly well the average value and purpose of these announcements [the pronouncements of the dynamiters as to what they proposed to do] that they were generally, though not always, composed for the express purpose of being cabled to London and being quoted in the House of Commons, so that subscribers should hurry up with the dollars, seeing how mortally John Bull was being 'frightened.' I knew that the leaders of the Irish movement here invariably refused to regard these things seriously and discouraged all notices of them as calculated only to serve a mischievous purpose. I am one of nearly two millions of Irishmen resident of this side of the Irish Channel. Our homes are in the midst of the cities that are forsooth to be kerosened and dynamited. Our little ones to roam in the fires which our chivalrous friends (safe and sound, 4,000 miles away), in New York or Peoria are to send men to start around us. The brute creation will fight for its young. Are we lower and baser than they? Could we hearken unmoved to childhoof's shriek from garret and nursery, calling in vain on 'Fathers' for rescue? Should we forsooth coolly answer back to our perishing children, 'Burn, burn away, dear little ones, in order that Mr. Crowe, of far off Peoria, may think that he has frightened John Bull.'"

"All things are lawful against England! Are they? What tribunal of public morality or religious accountability has settled that point? And what is meant by 'England'! Is it unarmed Englishmen and women and children? If so are we to cut the throats of any of 'the enemy' we can take at a disadvantage on a lonely road, or in a railway train? If so are we to 'frighten England' by battering out the brains of any little English boys or girls we can catch coming home from school? What is the difference in morality between employing men to treacherously burn down London, at no matter what sacrifice of human life, and employing them to poison the water mains and so kill 'the enemy' by millions? Or suppose some handful of his men secede from Mr. Crowe and call him 'half hearted' because he shrinks from a magnificent scheme for a simultaneous dosing of the London milk supply with strychnine, would they be entitled to call themselves 'Ireland' and make 'war' on 'England' after this fashion? Surely if the world could produce a body of men capable of any such line of action the nations and peoples of Christendom would confederate to exterminate them as human monsters."

"Well, I know no such cowardice and atrocity dare be practised or really will be practised. But while those men on your side of the water who publish such schemes are thinking of how to frighten 'John Bull,' or 'put Harcourt in a rage,' as some of them declare to me last autumn, they are not frightening England a bit, but they are doing horrible injury to Irishmen and to Ireland. They are evicting honest Irishmen from good employment and comfortable homes and casting them into cruel poverty. They are hurling Irish girls upon the streets of English cities. They are, before my eyes, driving Irish children of tender years to mendicancy and crime in the gutters and slums of London."

MINE TROUBLES.—Seventy men went to Ligan on the 19th and surrounded the men returning from work at Ligan mines, and ill-treated some of them. One man struck Mr. Lyne, the manager. After night about one hundred men visited the workmen's houses and broke doors and windows. On the 20th they broke the doors of some of the houses, and dragged the men out and beat three of them severely. Telegrams were sent to Sydney for constables to protect life and property. Non-union men and men who have left the union have been working at the mines.

The logic of matrimony now-a-days is conclusive. First, the ladies must marry; second, there are no real men to marry, only fools or "dunces"; and, third, therefore they marry money, with the very slender attachment of that "forked radish" called a man.

Fashionable Americans who are spending the winter at Nice pass the day in about the following manner: After a late breakfast there is a promenade on the streets till 12; then the midday meal; after this comes the drive and calling; dinner is at 7 o'clock, and tea and soirees fill up the evening.

The Archbishop of Tuam, replying to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland on behalf of the Catholic bishops of the country, states that the action of the Government in insisting on extending relief to the distressed people through the workhouse is an outrage on humanity, and a covert system of exterminating the native race.

An Indian Prince has ordered at Paris an elegant and costly bed of satinwood and silver, the most original part of which is a musical box, so that as soon as one lies down tunes selected from Gounod's operas strike up with ravishing melody. After years of this performance the Rajah will probably compose his own operas.

A cable from Sir Alexander Galt states that the Queen will open the fisheries exhibition on the 12th of May. Mr. S. Wilnot, of Ottawa, Dr. Honeyman, of Halifax, and Sheriff Joucas, of Gaspe, have been appointed managers of the fisheries exhibition in London on behalf of Canada. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the High Commissioner of Canada, and Sir F.
