N. Viet Nam Blasted By Control Commission

LONDON (AP)—A majority report from the International Control Commission made public here asserted that Communist North Viet Nam is seeking to overthrow the United States - supported South Viet Nam government.

But the report, signed by the Canadian and Indian members of the three-nation group, also accused the U.S. and South Viet Nam of breaching the 1954 Geneva armistice by forming what amounts to a military alliance.

The third member, Communist Poland, denounced the charges against North Viet Nam as artificial allegations. It agreed, however, that there was illegal collusion between U.S. and South Viet Nam armed forces.

The British government released the report after trying in vain to persuade the Soviet Union — co-chairman with Britain in the Indochinese peace conference at Geneva — to agree to joint publication.

Simultaneously South Viet Nam, fighting a jungle war against Communist guerrilla battalions, called on Britain and the Soviet Union Monday to force North Viet Nam to keep hands off.

North Viet Nam has been condemning the ICC report for several weeks — even before the report was submitted to the co-chairman — with denunciations of the Canadian and Indian delegations.

The commission report was not considered likely to cause much change in the situation. The ICC has no enforcing powers.

The report by the Indian and Canadian members — G. P. Parthasarathi and F. G. Hotton respectively — was turned over to Britain and the Soviet Union two weeks ago.

The majority report complained that "fundamental provisions of the Geneva agreement have been violated by both parties, resulting ine verincreasing tension and threat of resumption of open hostilities."

Society Of Deceivers, Psychologist Claims

By EDNA BLAKELY

KINGSTON (CP)—Why pick on advertising when talking about deception, Leonard Felfand, a Montreal psychologist has asked a national conference on consumer problems here.

Mr. Gelfand suggested Wednesday that "We are a society of deceivers; that we very often think one thing and say or do another; that advertising is just one area of deception; and that the main cause of deception is a society organized around beating the other guy."

To reduce the incidence of misleading advertising there must be a reduction in inter-human rivalry and conflict which permeates society, he said.

Mr. Felfand, the father of two young children said deception begins in children who are encouraged to believe fairy tales when they are capable of distinguishing the real from the make-believe world.

"Regardless of what you may think of its merits, there is no question about the deception of Santa Claus," he said. "But we don't stop here.

'WE DECEIVE THEM'

"We deceive our children by telling them that the bogey man or the policeman will take them away if they don't behave. We deceive them with ingeniously evasive explanations of birth and of death. Eventually, the child learns of all these deceptions and discovers that deceit is an accepted form of behavior regardless of admonitions by church and family to tell the truth."

Mr. Gelfand was a member of a panel discussing restriction of advertising at a conference sponsored by the Consumers Association of Canada.

H Scott Gordon of Carleton University, Ottawa, said he believes a democratic society should put up with a great deal in the way of abuses and perversions of freedom of expression rather than impose censorship.

"In our type of society censors tend to be Puritan, prissy-mouthed, American Gothic types, and I for one would rather have the advertisers," he said. Outright prohibition against advertising practices should be concerned primarily with matters of fraud.

GARDEN PROTEST

LICHFIELD, England (CP)—Two gardeners here are growing weeds for the district's "tidy garden" contest. Their gardens do not have fences and the council refuses to erect any, so to draw attention to their plight they have entered their weed - clad plots in the competition.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
4♥	Dble	Pass	5♠
Pass	6♠

Opening lead—ace of hearts.

What happens when one player with imagination bumps into another with imagination? Something's got to give, and it did in this hand played in a tournament.

West opened as dealer with four hearts. It was certainly a well-timed preemptive bid, since it turned out that North-South had the balance of strength.

North doubled — whether the double in this sequence is for business or takeout is a moot point — and South responded with five spades.

South was anxious to get to a slam if North had the right kind of hand, but he had no way of knowing whether a slam could be made, particularly since he had two losing hearts. So he consulted partner about it by jumping five spades. North, of course, bid six.

West led the ace of hearts. As anyone can plainly see, it doesn't take a great amount of skill to make six spades with this hand — but South wound up going down one!

On the ace of hearts, East (Jack Ehrlenbach of Los Angeles) played the king! West continued with a heart, and declarer, assuming that the four heart bid was based on a nine-card suit, trumped with the queen.

Declarer now led the seven of spades from dummy, East playing the six. South's imagination now started working overtime. He had seen Ehrlenbach follow low to the second heart lead and began to wonder why East had played the king on the opening trick.

Declarer finally came to the conclusion that the only sensible explanation for Ehrlenbach's play was that he had started with the J-10-6 of spades and was trying to develop a trump trick for himself by panicking South into ruffing with the queen.

So declarer finessed the seven and went down one. East's imagination proved to be more rewarding than South's.

We offer no opinion about declarer's play, which might have turned out right, but you have to hand the laurel to East for creating the opportunity that gave South a chance to go wrong.

Gambling Reported By Police

TORONTO (CP) — Dice and poker games took place in the office of the Ontario provincial police anti - gambling squad here, a police officer testified Wednesday before the royal commission on crime.

Const. John W. Moore testified to this effect under questioning by Walton C. Rose, counsel before the commission for gamblers Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley.

Mr. Rose told the commission he had been instructed that at one time a "bank" crap game was operated in the squad's headquarters by Const. Robert J. Wright, convicted this year with McDermott and Feeley of conspiring to obtain police information illegally.

Mr. Rose also represents Wright.

Const. Moore did not confirm this statement, though he said he had seen a bank crap game in progress attended by Wright and, he believed, Const Carman Lawrence and Kenneth Lamorie, who left the OPP in 1960 under suspicion of having dealings with professional gamblers.

Mr. Rose said he was informed that dice games were staged at the OPP office after Wright took a holiday in the gambling town of Las Vegas, Nev. and brought back a miniature crap layout.
