

Charge Detective Covering Up In Vancouver Probe

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
VANCOUVER (CP)—A charge that Det. Sgt. Len Cuthbert was covering up for somebody and not telling the entire truth in his story of police payoffs was made Wednesday by the royal commission hearing into alleged corruption within the Vancouver force.

T. G. Norris, counsel for police chief Walter Mulligan, led the sergeant through a repeat of his earlier testimony that Pete Wallace, mentioned as a big-time gambler, wanted to reopen the basement of the Dodson Hotel as a sporting club with gaming premises in the rear.

It was following two meetings between Cuthbert and Wallace and others, the witness had testified, that Mulligan approved protection payoffs.

CHIEF OPPOSED PERMIT

Then Mr. Norris, continuing his cross-examination, produced a letter which he said was sent by Chief Mulligan to the city council, listing six gambling convictions against persons using the Dodson premises and recommending that no licence to operate a sporting club be granted.

The letter disclosed that Cuthbert, as gambling squad sergeant, would oppose the application "at the city hall."

"And in fact did so," Cuthbert said.

Mr. Norris read from Cuthbert's report back to the chief, stating that the licence application for the east-end hotel was denied, and subsequent statements to the effect that the denial was appealed to the licensing committee of city council and that a licence was granted with a warning from the then mayor Charles Thompson.

PIONEER TRADITIONS ENSHRINED IN UNITED CHURCH AT CAVENDISH

By J. L. M.

Lucy Maud Montgomery, beloved Island authoress, was one of the first organists in the Presbyterian (now United) Church in Cavendish. Previously a tuning fork was used to obtain the correct pitch in singing and Mr. Ewan MacKenzie was the precursor.

The attractive white church, pictured above, in a setting of fir and birch, is a far cry from the manner in which the pioneers worshipped when there were no roads and when Indians lived along the shores.

About 1774 the first settlers came to Cavendish from Morayshire, Scotland, and for twenty-two years they had no gospel ordinances. However, they had not forgotten their early training in the pious homes of their youth and the greater number observed the worship of God with their families.

The first Presbyterian minister who visited and preached in Cavendish was Rev. James McGregor, D.D. of Pictou, N. S. On July 16, 1806, he preached in the home of Mr. James Simpson, grandfather of the late Rev. Allan Simpson of Park Street Church, Halifax, N.S. He visited and preached there again before 1810, when Dr. John Keir was settled in Princeton, (Malpeque).

The early congregation was composed chiefly of McNeill's, Simpson's, Laird's and Clark's. The people were able to conduct religious services intelligently among themselves and they did so until they obtained a pastor of their own.

PIONEER CONDITIONS

Dr. Keir gave but a limited supply as he had pastoral oversight of Prince County and part of Queen's. The vast extent of the parish, the scarcity of roads, the entire absence of all modern comforts of travel, the exposure and hardships which he endured in the performance of his ministerial duties must have been extremely difficult. He travelled chiefly on horseback, wending his way along the shore, swimming his horse across rivers and creeks, while he paddled over in a canoe.

Until 1816 all the services were conducted in private houses and in the schoolhouse. That year the first church was built of logs at Yankee Hill, near the entrance to New London Harbor. Here the early settlers of Cavendish worshipped. It was related by some to their grandchildren that it was necessary to walk across the sandhills from Cavendish, then ferry over to the land and walk the rest of the way to church. As shoes were difficult to obtain, the people walked barefoot until near the church when they put on their shoes.

Cavendish and New London, which had constituted a part of Dr. Keir's charge for twenty years, were organized into a separate and distinct congregation in 1826. At once a call was extended to Mr. Hugh Dunbar, who was ordained and inducted in March, 1827. Those taking part in the ordination service were Reverends John Keir, Robert Douglas and R. S. Patterson, M.A.

This man of more than ordinary ability gave eight years of faithful service and he was instrumental in erecting a comfortable church. It was begun in 1830 and, when almost completed, a forest fire sweeping through the settlement destroyed the labor of months. The land for the church and cemetery was donated by Mr. James McNeill. In 1831 a new church was built.

DR. GEDDIE'S PASTORATE

The next minister who settled in Cavendish and New London was Mr. John Geddie. He was ordained and inducted in 1838. The call was signed by 34 communicants and 7 adherents. Reverends Robert Douglas, John Keir, William McGregor and R. S. Patterson conducted the ordination service. During Dr. Geddie's pastorate the elders were Messrs. William Mc-

Neill, Alex Sutherland, John McKenzie, James Clark and Donald McLeod. Dr. Geddie was untiring in his labors and he brought with him a zeal for foreign missions.

In 1837 he formed a missionary society in his own congregation and, through his influence, missionary societies were formed in all the congregations of the Presbytery. The first contributions were sent to the London Missionary Society. The question of undertaking the support of a foreign missionary was brought before the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Nova Scotia in 1844 by Dr. Geddie.

The Synod decided in 1845 to undertake the work and advertised for a missionary. Dr. Geddie, who had been dedicated for foreign mission work by godly parents as an expression of gratitude to God for sparing their child's life in a case of severe illness, offered his services. He was accepted. Thus in 1845 there went from this Island the first missionary from the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and one of the most successful, for he could say "When I landed on Anneton there was not a Christian and before I left there was not a heathen on the island."

This pastorate remained vacant for four years receiving such supplies as possible from the Presbytery.

Mr. Isaac Murray was ordained and inducted in January, 1850. The call was signed by 101 communicants and 41 adherents. Those taking part in the ordination service were Reverends R. S. Patterson, John Keir and J.C. Sinclair. Mr. Murray was a teacher as well as a preacher. In recognition of his ability the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by one of the leading colleges in the United States. Among the outstanding men he had prepared for College were Rev. Allan Simpson, Rev. L. G. McNeill, Rev. Andrew Lockerby, Rev. George Laird, Hon. David Laird, Rev. Charles Fraser.

LARGER CHURCH ERECTED

During his pastorate of twenty-eight years, a second and larger church was erected on the same site, the north-east corner of what is now Cavendish cemetery. The entrance was on the south and the windows were semi-gothic. A large high pulpit reached by steps was at the north and a gallery extended across the south end. The front seats of the gallery were used by the choir members.

A call, signed by 146 members and a large number of adherents, was extended to Rev. Wm. P. Archibald, M.A. who was inducted in 1878. For eighteen years he discharged all the duties of his office with fidelity and success. Conferred upon him was the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. At Mr. Archibald's farewell service the choir under the direction of the late Mrs. G. W. Bell rendered special selections and was accompanied by an organ which had been borrowed and placed in the church for this service. Mrs. Elton Robertson of Summerside and Mrs. R. W. Stevenson of New Glasgow were the only two surviving members of that choir.

Rev. G. C. Robertson was the next minister and he was succeeded by Rev. M. H. McIntosh, B.A. in 1899.

At the turn of the century the sixty-five year old church was torn down and the lumber sold in preparation for a new building. Due to a disagreement about the site, services were held in the hall until the present edifice was erected on land donated by Mr. John F. McNeill. The elders at this time (1902) were Messrs. George Simpson, James Simpson and Robert Brown.

The church was finished in oak and mahogany with painted plaster walls and canopy effect ceiling in matching wood. The choir and organ are to the right of the pulpit. Miss Mabel Simpson, who had been the first organist, married Rev. M. H. McIntosh.

From 1903 to 1908 Rev. Ewan MacDonald was the minister and he married the talented Lucy Maud Montgomery. The next minister, Rev. John Stirling, was inducted in 1908 and remained for ten years. He had the honor of officiating at the marriage of our beloved authoress and Rev. Ewan MacDonald, both of whom are buried in Cavendish cemetery.

SUBSEQUENT PASTORS

Rev. J. Sutherland Bonnell was ordained and inducted in 1922. He is the pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City. The next year Dr. E. M. Aitken was ordained and inducted. He re-

Phonetic Alphabet For Pilots Nearing Completion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—My word, said the Englishman, that word is hopeless. Okay, said his American associate, let's try something else. How about November?

It's no word game that has stumped the experts, but problems of a new phonetic alphabet for pilots. And the speech experts have fallen into international disagreement, tripped up by the letter "N".

It's the only letter the research men haven't been able to team up with a suitable, clear word.

Dr. Eric Bell, director of research for Britain's ministry of transport and civil aviation, arrived here to struggle with the issue.

His American associate, Dr. Henry Moser, director of Ohio State University's speech and hearing clinic, said the field has narrowed to three words—Nectar, Nugget and November.

When the new alphabet is completed, Dr. Bell and Dr. Moser will submit it to the International Civil Aviation Organization at its convention in Montreal this September. If the 64-nation group adopts it, Dr. Moser said English will become the international language of the air.

Dr. Moser said clarity tests showed the new phonetic alphabet is about 94 per cent intelligible, even with noise from aircraft engines. He said the "Able, Baker, Charlie" system rated only about 69 per cent.

The new system reads: Alfa, Bravo, Charlie, Delta, Echo, Fox, Golf, Hotel, Indian, Juliett, Kilo, Lima, Mike, Oscar, Papa, Quebec, Romeo, Sierra, Tango, Uniform, Victor, Whisky, X-ray, Yankee and Zulu. A decision on N is expected soon.

Of course, Dr. Moser said, not every one will be satisfied with the new alphabet. "There will be people," he said, "who will object to Whisky."

The church was finished in oak and mahogany with painted plaster walls and canopy effect ceiling in matching wood. The choir and organ are to the right of the pulpit. Miss Mabel Simpson, who had been the first organist, married Rev. M. H. McIntosh.

From 1903 to 1908 Rev. Ewan MacDonald was the minister and he married the talented Lucy Maud Montgomery. The next minister, Rev. John Stirling, was inducted in 1908 and remained for ten years. He had the honor of officiating at the marriage of our beloved authoress and Rev. Ewan MacDonald, both of whom are buried in Cavendish cemetery.

India Concerned Over Shooting

NEW DELHI (AP)—Home Minister G. B. Pant Thursday denounced the fatal shooting by Portuguese police of two Indians among a group demonstrating for a merger of Portuguese India with India.

Parliament was told Prime Minister Nehru's government is deeply concerned over the incident Wednesday at the border of Goa, largest of Portugal's three small territories on the Indian west coast.

"This is new evidence of the brutal methods which Portuguese authorities are employing against peaceful demonstrators," Pant said.

"We are in constant touch with the consul-general in Goa and are considering what further steps to take."
