

Canadian Army Doctor Saves Bedouin Mother And Infant

A young Canadian Army medical officer, Capt. Glen F. Vancott, 30, of Kingston and Picton, Ont., has been credited with saving the lives of a young Bedouin woman and her new-born child.

Capt. Vancott, serving in the Middle East with the Canadian component of the United Nations Emergency Force, last Wednesday was called to the UNEF Hospital in Rafah to administer treatment to a seriously-ill, 18-year-old Bedouin woman, suffering from acute complications of pregnancy. Her husband had brought her on a long trek across the desert by donkey.

POWER FAILS

A dramatic, six-hour struggle followed during the night, complicated by a failure of power in the medical shelter. The delicate operation went on with the aid of flashlights, and at five o'clock in the morning a two-month premature daughter was born. Capt. Vancott then had to administer artificial respiration to the child for a 30-minute period before it responded.

To save the child's life a hastily-improvised incubator was built by Canadian medical assistants from a cardboard carton, lined with gauze. The incubator was then placed near an oil-burning space heater for warmth.

By mid-morning, mother and daughter were fine and two female nurses and the young father took the pair to a maternity ward at the Rafah Clinic.

DIFFICULTIES

During the critical operation, there was no communication between the young woman and Capt. Vancott because of language difficulties. Adding to the young mother's anxiety was the fact that she was being treated by a non-Mohammedan, white doctor. This was her first child and she had never set eyes on a doctor before.

The following day, however, through an interpreter, she gratefully acknowledged the UNEF assistance, and said her people in the desert trust and respect the Canadians for their assistance to Bedouins in the past.

The first experience with childbirth was something quite new for medical assistants of the Canadian Army, "but" said Capt. Vancott, "they came through with flying colours."

Through an agreement between UNEF and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) Clinic at Rafah, Army doctors can now treat emergency cases where the patient would not survive the long journey to Gaza, some 30 miles away.

Weybridge Due On First Voyage

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—The British freighter M.S. Weybridge, whose unusual contours are strangely reminiscent of a fish, is due to arrive here from Glasgow today on her maiden voyage to load 10,000 tons of grain for India.

The vessel's designer - owner, Edmund Watts, who is also chairman of the British Steamship Company Limited, says the ship's hull design incorporates a number of novel ideas he gleaned from watching fish.

The Weybridge's slightly-bulging bow was inspired by the powerful shoulders of the Atlantic salmon and the knife-like stern has two unique fins copied from the tall-membrane of the blue tuna found off Nova Scotia. Mr. Watts, a keen fisherman, said experiments showed the 16-foot fins add almost a knot to the ship's speed by improving the water flow at the propeller.

Timothy Gives Highest Yield

OTTAWA—Variety tests of timothy and orchard grass seeded side by side at the Experimental Farm, Canada Department of Agriculture, Fredericton, N.B. in 1956 and given identical treatment, support evidence previously obtained here that timothy will outyield any other species of grass tested.

T.C. Chasson of that farm states that even the poorest of the grasses tested yielded slightly more dry matter per acre for the first cutting than the best orchard grass variety in two cuttings. The yields of orchard grass had to be cut about three weeks earlier to obtain forage at a similar stage of maturity.

Each variety of each grass was cut as it reached full bloom. The earliest variety of orchard grass was harvested on June 13, while

States Conduct Of Air Attache Above Reproach

OTTAWA (CP)—The external affairs department says recent allegations of "hooliganism" involving Canada's air attache in Russia and three travelling companions apparently developed from a mixup in train reservations.

"We are satisfied receiving a report from our Moscow embassy that Group Capt. Sidney Mitchell behaved in a correct way and that his conduct throughout the journey was above reproach," a department spokesman said Friday.

The allegations were carried in Komsomol Pravda, the Young Communist newspaper published in Moscow, based on a letter received from a science student named Svetitskiy.

"We have been informed by the Canadian Embassy in Moscow that there was a mixup in reservations in connection with a recent train journey made in the U.S.S.R. by four service attaches, including the Canadian air attache," the spokesman said. He added the attaches objected when they were asked to give up accommodation of the type they had initially reserved, but they complied with the request of the Russian personnel in charge. The Soviet student said Group Capt. Mitchell, Col. Thomas W.

Wolfe, the United States air attache, Sqdn. Ldr. Lawrence V. Baku. Officials described the allegations as "petty and trivial" to the extreme.
