Queen's Farmers

(Continued from Page 1) Mr. Parent quoted from the "Soil Conservation and Related Problems in P.E.I." report by the P.E.I. Branch of the Agriculture Institute of Canada.

He noted that the book, which is printed and distributed in co-operation with the Department of Education, was now in every school within the province.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers included C. B. Waugh, president of the Prince Edward Island federation and Mr. Dewar. There was no representative of the Potato Producers Association at the meeting.

Mr. Waugh stated that there is not a harder working or more honest people than the people of Prince Edward Island and there is no group of people with less guarantee than the farmers of this province.

"It seems the harder we work, the less returns we get," he said.

Mr. Waugh noted that in Nova Scotia the Federation of Agriculture asked that the floor price on eggs be done away with.

"There is a problem before us, in trying to make a living for ourselves," he said.

"Price supports are not the whole answer. This is a problem which requires good clear thinking if we are to make a way for ourselves," he added.

GET RAW DEAL Mr. Waugh said "Rural people are getting a raw deal on education."

"We have not enough satisfactory teachers to man these little red school houses" on the island," he said.

"If we can get satisfactory teachers today we would have very little problems in education," he added.

Mr. Waugh said he was quite surprised last year to find that of all the students taking teachers training at Prince of Wales College, very few were from Charlottetown.

"Whatever way we look at it, we are not getting a fair deal," Lincoln Dewar reported that

Canada's Indians Can Help Nation, Given More Freedom

Canada's Indian population could contribute a great deal to the building of a better Canada, but needed more freedom of action in which to do so, Ethel Brant Monture of Brantford, Ont., told a dinner meeting of the Canadian Club of Prince Edward Island last night.

Mrs. Monture, who is a full-blooded Mohawk Indian, a great-granddaughter of the famous chief, Joseph Brant, was the first woman to speak to the local Canadian Club in its three year history. She was introduced and thanked by the club president, F. W. Curtis, who presided.

The guest speaker expressed regret that most Canadians failed to realize that his Indian fellow citizens loved this land just as deeply as the descendants of the European settlers. "After all it is the only home we ever had," she said.

Only one side of the Indian picture appeared in the textbooks on TV, and in the movies, Mrs. Monture maintained. The happy, peaceful, settled people described by Columbus and Cartier were forgotten and replaced in people's minds by the embittered groups that evolved from the great land struggle that emerged later.

SCALPING UNKNOWN Before 1637 "scalping" was unknown among the American Indian tribes. It was the bounty offered by the Puritans and later the French, that initiated this practice.

"It was easy to say 'savages' in order to have excuse for many of the bad things that happened in those days."

Mrs. Monture declared that at the time the first Europeans arrived on this continent the Indians had an adequate language and was a very sociable people, who thought far more of a good orator than a mighty warrior.

At both Stadacona (Quebec) and Hochelaga (Montreal) Cartier found well-established settlements protected by well-tilled fields of corn. Even at that early day each of these large Indian villages were important trade centres, with trade routes extending southward through the river valleys dominated by the five nations. The white usurpation of the long-established Indian trade was greatly responsible for the many conflicts that ensued, Mrs. Monture asserted.

EARLY DEMOCRATS Indians like to think that the people of America learned the principles of democracy and freedom from them. In support of this contention the guest speaker quoted from a recent editorial in a prominent American newspaper, which credited the Five Nation Confederacy established in the mid-fifteenth century as the first example of warring peoples banding together for peaceful purposes.

"Only in recent years has the modern world attempted this sensible solution," the speaker noted.

Efforts of missionaries to mold the Indian to their own image was a grave mistake, Mrs. Monture declared. Many of these well-intentioned people failed to appreciate Indian culture and neglected to train Indian leaders she said.

"By now people should realize that Indian people had definite ideas as to the kind of schools and churches they wanted."

As proof that the Canadian Indian could produce outstanding leaders, Mrs. Monture selected three who had played a prominent part in Canadian affairs: Joseph Brant, soldier, statesman and missionary, Blackfoot, the Crowfoot chief, who fought the land grabbers and wiskey traders of the West; and Dr. Martin, founder of the International Order of Foresters.

"In the years ahead, the people of the world are going to look towards Canada in no uncertain fashion," she said, "therefore we must be prepared to show them a good example."

In addition to the Club president and the guest speaker, head table guests at the dinner included: His Honor, F. Walter Hyndman, Mayor Edwin C. Johnstone and Mrs. Johnstone, Rev. T.H.B. Somers and Mrs. Somers, Miss Mabel Matheson, Mrs. Curtis, and Dr. George Fisher and Mrs. Fisher.
