Queen Mother Present

As soon as the gangplank was in place Queen Mary, showing no trace of her recent automobile accident, walked up to greet her son and his consort, followed by the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood.

The party came ashore amid deafening cheers. The King and Queen could be stretched across Southampton streets banners carrying the messages "Well Done" and "Welcome Home." Crowds which had been pouring down to the wharves of the great south coast port, echoed these messages. Boarding the Royal train this writer was privileged to witness from an excellent point of vantage the thrilling send-off the King and Queen received as they set out for London. All along the railway right-of-way at every station crowds were gathered to cheer and welcome their Majesties. Among the throng assembled near Purfleet were members of the Canadian Blesley Team which arrived there a few days ago to compete in the Empire rifle meet next month. Similar demonstrations of loyalty greeted the cream and brown train as it rushed through London's suburbs. In a carriage, accompanied by their daughters, the King and Queen then rode in triumph through London.

Series Of Triumphs

The day was one continuous series of triumphs for their Majesties from the moment the majestic royal yacht appeared out of the mists at Southampton to the supreme moment at the Palace when the reunited family stood on the balcony.

The throng raised a roar audible for many blocks when the King and Queen came out for a second time. But what really touched the hearts of the vast populace was the waving of Princess Margaret Rose. She waved her right hand until it became tired and then continued to wave with the left hand, with her sister Elizabeth, standing by and helping.

The great day of homecoming started in the English Channel, where the characteristic fog dulled the color of the day. As it gradually dispersed the Empress of Britain moved in leisurely fashion up the channel well within schedule.

Greeted By Princesses

As the liner neared Portsmouth the Flotilla Leader, Kompenfelt came out, bringing the 15-year-old Princess Elizabeth, her presumptive to the Throne, and eight-year-old Margaret Rose.

The royal sailors they dashed quickly up a ladder of the Empress, where their smiling parents awaited them and in a moment were in their arms. "Hello Mummy," they shouted.

It was a great day for the Princesses. They went all around the big ship and up to the Captain's bridge. Under one arm they clutched a Canadian dollar, that of a scarlet-coated "Mountie" brought them by their parents, under the other they carried a letter from the Duke and Duchess of York.

As the Royal liner glided near the end of its journey a flotilla of excursion boats grew hourly. Tugs, sidewheelers, sailboats made up an informal escort, until more than 100 craft of all sizes and shapes dotted the water about the liner. From these floating grandstands crowds cheered themselves hoarse all the way into Southampton to the shrill accompaniment of steam whistles and the deep notes of large sirens.

Duke Entertained By German Count

PARIS, June 22 (CP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor dined tonight at the residence of the German Ambassador to Paris, Count Johannes Von Welzow. Aides of the Duke, who said he is 45 years of age tomorrow said the dinner was a private one among friends and was without official significance. The Duke and Count have known each other for many years. It was added. Yesterday the Duke and Duchess entertained United States newsmen who made the Transatlantic crossing on the Atlantic Clipper. The Duke was eager for views of the American reporters on the visit of his brother, King George VI, to North America, and joined the Duchess in expressing the hope of making a visit to the United States. "I am delighted he had such a fine reception in America," the Duke said. "I followed his trip as best I could through newspapers."

Institute Meet

afternoon the convention adopted several additional resolutions. One was to discontinue with the present school curriculum and suggested several changes in the higher grades.

"That state medicine be made compulsory for all children of school age be given the tuberculosis test" was recommended in another resolution.

Final resolution urged the government to erect and connect these along the road sides and replace those removed by road building operations. One delegate voiced strong opposition to the latter recommendation claiming there proved great snow catchers during winter months.

Tuberculin Test Discussed

The tuberculin test for school children was discussed at the closing session yesterday. A number of the delegates spoke in favor of it and no voices were raised in opposition. "Special attention would be given to a study of the tuberculin test" in the health program for the next year, the convention decided.

Miss Mona Wilson, chief public health nurse for the Province spoke briefly on what had been done in the past year in conducting tuberculin tests in public schools of the Province. Forty-six schools, 2440 pupils had been tested and 12.5 per cent active results found. Of that number ten pupils were suspects and ten in early stages of cure by rest. The tests had meant the saving of 20 young people from developing tuberculosis, a worth while work. She stressed its value as a "preventive measure" and told the delegates that under present conditions the public health staff could not undertake a Province wide application of the test. She advised the work be confined to schools in districts where cases of tuberculosis were known to exist.

An interesting feature of the afternoon session was presentation of a symposium by delegates directed by Mrs. Harold Leard of Kelvin.

Concluding Business

The "question box" in which the tuberculin test came up included the business of the convention. A valuable aid towards making the convention a success this year was the speaker system which enabled all speakers to be heard in all parts of the Prince of Wales College Assembly Hall where sessions were held.

The platform at the hall was beautifully decorated with flowers while the background was featured in red white and blue, while the Institute insignia with its motto "Home and Country" occupied a central position.

Included in the resolutions passed were expressions of thanks to all who assisted in making the convention a success.

EDUCATION

"It is with a great deal of pleasure I bring to you my second report on the Questionnaire 'Education and Better Schools'." Mrs. Douglas Bell, Cape Traverse, said. "Replies have been received from seventy Institutes, not as many as I had hoped for, but I thought rather disappointing, as I thought with the short questionnaire, answers would come from nearly all Institutes. All reports however, showed the careful discussion, although only twenty of the groups state the organization of Adult Study Groups in their communities; others are interested in groups in adjoining communities, and we are all aware that a great many Adult Study Clubs are organized in Prince Edward Island."

"Some of the groups report studying Credit Unions, co-operation in a bank, and themselves forming Credit Unions. Others have studied feeding of hogs and other animals, psychology, literary study, and young people are active in learning to take part in public meetings."

"We all very much appreciate the value of Adult Education, of the beneficial results from such effort in the great need for leadership in local communities."

"The Public School Curriculum is familiar to those having pupils attending schools. Some suggest more work in literature and composition under our present school system, while others express themselves as satisfied, and trust to the opinions of those entrusted with mapping out the course of studies."

"The question dealing with the forming of centres for secondary education and paving the way for the teaching of optional subjects was discussed. I feel quite fully at your meetings, and some very excellent ideas were expressed. The majority report favoring such a plan, and hope it may not just be an idea but become, in the near future, an actual fact to make possible a balanced education, a greater competitive spirit among pupils of practically the same standing a bridge in the change of method between rural schools and Prince of Wales College, a chance for giving more time to pupils needing individual aid, and more time for foundation work so important in the junior grades. This is a great step forward, and Women's Institutes would do well to start earnest agitation for such a system. All other things have changed, so why not try to improve our school system."

"One Institute reported such a centre being opened in their section about sixteen years ago. It had all the advantages, gave excellent service to the surrounding districts, and grand results were evident. However, due to overcrowding of teaching profession and lessening of interest, as the course at Prince of Wales College became more or less of a factory for turning out teachers, the work was discontinued."

"On one Institute reporting did not approve a change in our present system, and all who returned the questionnaires, with the exception of two, filled the space provided with expressions of a keen interest for such an arrangement. The obvious stumbling block, of course, is the transportation, which would necessarily have to be provided, but personally I feel if we are all so anxious and eager enough they can always get, for the voice of the people is heard. The convictions of a large number of representative women, who are thoroughly in earnest and alive to the issues, cannot be ignored. I hope you will enter fully into a frank discussion of this report when discussion is opened."

"In closing I wish to tell you how much I have enjoyed my term on your executive, and take this opportunity of thanking you for your splendid support and co-operation," the committee convenor said.

PEACE AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

"Once more it is my privilege and pleasure to report on Peace and International Relations," Mrs. W. R. Leard, Bedouque, told the Institute. "and we will start with the question 'Have we made any progress towards peace since last year?' Many and varied were the answers received, probably just as one paper would be filled in and sent to me by train or by mail would start in Europe and the aid of radio and public press would be fanned into a stiff breeze thereby blowing seeds of fear into our minds until we scarcely knew what would happen next. Then later, as if by a magician's wand, everything seemed to quiet down, and we ask ourselves the question 'How long?' said the Minister Chamberlain has said, 'do not think anyone could describe the world as living under the conditions of peace. There is still in Europe the fear of war, and even in our own country, a feeling of insecurity. That great question of unemployment which gives so much leisure time to brood over the rights and wrongs of our generation seems all too detrimental to peace. And just what can be done about it?'"

"We cannot live without the people of other lands; no man can live to himself and neither can a nation. We in Canada have vast acres with so few living thereon while other nations are overcrowded beyond conception. Can we ever hope for a peaceful attitude while conditions remain like that?'"

"It seems to me there is a great problem for the women of our Institutes today and that is to instill in the minds of our youth, the idea of broadening out, not fostering those petty prejudices which are all too prevalent and when they go out to take their places in the world there will be that spirit of unity and good fellowship with war a thing to be forgotten."

"The recent visit of our King and Queen has done much to promote that feeling and given sceptics a very different idea of life in general."

"I have received fewer Questionnaires than usual this year, but the ones that came to me were very carefully thought out, and I only wish all could read them."

"I wish to thank the Institutes for their co-operation with regard to material for portfolio, which you see exhibited before you, and I hope more can be added before these articles are grouped in book form to be sent to the countries," Mrs. Leard concluded.

Royal Visit Is Boost For Canada

LONDON, June 22 (CP Cable)—"I think I know as much about Canada as you do," one stateley Englishwoman said today as she greeted her husband who had been accompanying the Royal Party in Canada.

"You see," she added, "I've read so much in the Canadian papers you sent over and I passed them around to all my friends."

She added that Canadian newspapers had poured into Great Britain from friends living in the Dominion.

New Recovery Plan For United States

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Congress received from President Roosevelt today the administration's newest plan for stimulating employment, a seven-year, $3,060,000,000 lending program for projects designated as self-liquidating, and $800,000,000 more for the low-cost housing program.

In addition, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he was considering a reduction in the interest rate of mortgages insured by the federal housing administration in an effort to induce more private residential construction.

Seek Re-opening Of Theatres In Quebec

QUEBEC, June 22 (CP)—In a move aimed at re-opening of Quebec City's 11 movie theatres, the city administrative committee by a resolution called for repeal within a year of the 10 per cent increase in the civic amusement tax provided the new impost is shown to be "harmful to business."

The special resolution was approved late today, just three weeks after all Quebec movie houses closed their doors in protest against the new tax.

Two days ago, city authorities had heard representations from a delegation of theatre operators, restaurant owners and business men who contended the three-week shutdown of the theatres hurt business.
