

Thoughts For Our Time

THE BASIS OF DEMOCRACY

Democracy in a sense is a paradox. It is the exalting of man to his true position as an intelligent self-ruler, free and the lord of creation. And yet it carries within itself the danger of lowering him to a mere unit lost in a great multitude. Democracy does away with slavery and the abject subordination of man to a state or to another man. But where strict divisions and hierarchies of society are done away with, there sometimes results a levelling process where everyone becomes of equal value on a plane which is none too high.

Take for example the great sameness which is so evident in our society. We all live in the same kind of home, furnished in a rather common manner, succumb to the pressure of the same advertisements, seek the same recreation in movies and ball-games, creation in movies and ball-games, strive television; and we call it democratic living. But where in this does the true excellence or dignity of the human person show itself? How is man exalted in this? Where are the leaders so necessary in our darkness, and so lamentably lacking? This pattern of living seems to stifle the development of the leader or the saint.

The golden, comfortable, contented mediocrity which characterizes us is a far cry from the noble nature of real democracy. The goal we now strive for is wealth, and the pleasure it brings—and which turns to ashes in our mouth. Is this animal happiness the extent of man's dignity? Is this the summit of his potentiality? What has become of the individual perfection of man's greatest powers? What has become of the pursuit of greatness measured in terms of the love of God? There is no leader who ever held out so high a challenge as Christ: "Be ye perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect."

Democracy is not at fault; our understanding and appreciation of democracy is at fault. There is nothing belonging essentially to the nature of democracy which demands this great mediocrity and sameness. For unquestionably, within the ideals of democracy and within a democratic political framework the human spirit has the greatest room for its perfect realization. But the human spirit is the creature of God, and subject to God's laws. Men will never be great until they see in the law of God the means for reaching godhead.

A person who is sick appreciates what a wonderful thing it is to be healthy. When he was strong he never thought of the great boon he continually enjoyed. Wouldn't it be tragic if we were to fail to appreciate democracy until we had it no longer? It is fearful to think that our continued abuse of this precious heritage will most surely mean the loss of it.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Gutenberg did not originate printing, although he is often given credit for it. Who then was the originator of printing? Nobody knows, but the first printing was done with patterns on cloth.

In one Philadelphia plant 120 giant presses run day and night, printing 12,000,000 magazines a month, each with 100 to 200 pages, with five colored covers, and illustrations, all bound—20 small cars of magazines every 24 hours!

Separated from his better half for 39 years, Paolo Crescenzo, 67, returned to his native Italy and found his wife still in love and waiting his return. Paolo, a small farmer near Naples, came to the U.S. to seek his fortune. He settled in Spokane, Wash., and began to work as a section hand. New York police found him ready to return last month. He was in Grand Central Station, sleeping on his well-worn suitcase, with $23,550 of Uncle Sam's shekels in his jeans.

When his ship docked in Naples he got 39 kisses.

"Today's sweet young things prefer a long engagement to determine whether the boy friend can afford her."

If the brain called for food as regularly and insistently as the stomach does, the average person would know more than could be crammed into a dozen encyclopedias.

In Los Angeles a surgeon scooped a patient by broadcasting an appendectomy while he performed the operation.

The patient, who was named P.T. Barnum, famous showman, would fill a dozen or more pamphlets. He left instructions for the distribution of his large fortune and also for the maintenance, and upkeep and expansion of his famous circus.

The Black Ball is a curious fish in that it lives in water and eats only sunshine. This oddity is found in the lakes of Japan and Switzerland. The creature is minus legs, arms, fins, wings, or other aids to navigation. On cloudy days it stays under water, but when old Sol shines it comes to the surface to feed on the sun's rays.

The little sea horse is the only fish that can swim in an upright position, and he has a tail like a monkey. He has B.O. and tastes so bad that other fish give him a cold shoulder.

New Zealand, the Azores, and Ireland are believed to be the only countries in the world without snakes.

The first electric cell, made in 1800, consisted of a number of silver quarters and an equal number of zinc discs of the same size piled alternately on top of one another, within a shell, and with pieces of damp cloth between the discs. Wires were fastened to the top and bottom of the case or shell and when these were joined, presto! There was a steady flowing current of electricity. Thus did electric engineering begin!

The disappearance of the horse as a source of farm power means that the more land is available for feeding people, C. F. Kettaring, research consultant for General Motors calculated that 4 1/2 persons can be dined on land required to produce fodder for one horse. That means in the U.S. 80 million more people can be fed without farming an extra acre.

In the time that a good runner runs 100 yards, the little sprinters of the rainbow can girdle the earth at the equator more than seven times. A rocket plane goes 600 miles an hour, but a sunbeam can give it a start of 5,000,000 miles in a five million and one mile race, and beat it!

Fruit farmers in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley are using shotguns to fertilize their trees!

From about 10 feet, a farmer fires a shell containing 1/15 of an ounce of pollen from a standard 12-gauge shotgun. The pollen settles on the blossoms and fertilizes them. The pollen is shipped from California and Oregon.

Because he likes children Mr. D. D. Vaughn, a wealthy contractor from Texas recently bought six newspapers from six newboys and gave them six, one hundred dollar bills.

The amount of heat given off by old Sol in a single year is staggering. Dr. C. C. Abbott calculates that it is equal to the amount of heat given off by 200,000,000,000,000,000 tons of anthracite coal, and would suffice to melt hundreds of millions of tons of ice.

The heat that issues from two square feet on the sun would, if it could be utilized, drive the engines of the largest Atlantic liner between Liverpool and New York.

These impressive figures give us at least some idea of the tremendous heating power of heaven's furnace, which man may some day harness and put to work for the benefit of the human race.

SERVICE AT CEMETERY—An impressive ceremony which included prayers for the repose of the souls of those departed was held yesterday at the Roman Catholic Cemetery. There was a large attendance of parishioners. Rev. Patrick McMahon, D.D., of St. Dunstan's Basilica, officiated, the sermon being preached by Rev. A. A. McLeilan, C.Ss.R., of the Holy Redeemer Parish.

NANCY IRENE LOWTHER
"Budded on earth to bloom in Heaven."

"A bud the Gardener gave us, A pure and lovely child; He gave it to our keeping, To cherish undefiled. But just at its adolescence, To the glory of the day, Down came the Heavenly Gardener, And took our bud away."

On Tuesday, August 12th, a mother's hope, a father's joy, in the person of Nancy Irene Lowther, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lowther, New Dominion, was very suddenly called from this world to her heavenly home, at the tender age of fifteen months. On the above mentioned date, in his infallible and just authority and in his unquestionable knowledge of what is best for each and all, saw fit to permit her to be the victim of an accident, entirely blameless to any mortal, which occurred in the yard of her parents' home.

In her supreme innocence, little Mary has attained Heaven in a way lost to adolescence and womanhood. She has escaped the struggle, the buffeting and the groping of this world, the return for which is but a transitory happiness.

In her very brief sojourn in this "vale of tears", she brought joy and sorrow; she loved and was loved; now she has gone to be loved forever.

Her grief-stricken parents and her sorrowing grandfather, who was very deeply attached to his lovely little grandchild, will sorely miss her sunny smile and her loving presence in the home, but they are comforted and strengthened by their faith and belief that their beloved "little pilgrim" will one day, with outstretched arms of welcome, receive them to be with her in eternal bliss.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, was held from her parents' home to New Dominion Cemetery. Service at the home and at the grave was conducted by Rev. A. S. Weir, pastor of New Dominion United Church.

Pallbearers were: Messrs. Ivan Taylor, Louis Livingstone, John MacEwen, and Angus MacDonald. Hymns sung during the service were: "Jesus Loves Me", and "When He Cometh To Make Up His Jewels".

Mr. and Mrs. Lowther were the recipients of numerous letters and cards of sympathy, and the following floral tributes, for all of which they are deeply grateful: Pillow—Mummy, Daddy and Grampy. Sprays—Aunt Helen, Uncle Walter and family. Aunt Mary and Uncle Wendell. Uncle Robert, Uncle Russel and Aunt Muriel. Arthur, Bessie and Shirley MacDonald. Jimmie and Mamie Gorveatt. Leo and Margaret Taylor and family. Aunt Ruth, Newton and Thelma Taylor. Wesley and Annabelle MacDougall. Dan and Florence Livingstone and family. Gilbert and Sarah MacDougall. Robbie MacDonald's family. Kath Campbell. Lem Wilma and Linda MacDonald. New Dominion W. I. New Dominion United Church Ladies Aid. Cut Flowers:—The MacMillan family. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dolron. Wren-Lem and Ruth Gorveatt and family.

The Lake Of Shining Waters

(At Cavendish, P.E.I.)

O Lake of Shining Waters, How calm and still you lie; The woodlands around you are dreaming, Gay dreams of days gone by, Float leisurely across a sunset sky. When Anne walked beside your waters, Our Anne with auburn hair; Slim and gray-eyed and lovely, She gazes about her there.

On the green of the distant valleys, On the far-off murmuring sea; And in fancy she sees the Dryad That lives in the old Birch tree.

She hears in the Spruce and Maples Wind music low and sweet, As she gathers the shy white violets That blossom beneath her feet...

O Lake of Shining Waters Where sunlight and shadows play, Are you waiting for Anne's return? Our Anne who has gone away.

—Constance I. Heckbert.

GRAVELBOURG, Sask.—(CP)—Double-headed wheat, with two heads of wheat on one stem, turned up on the district farm of Roscoe Bekker. He says that while the whole crop was not of the "Siamese" variety, there were enough double-headed stalks to increase the yield appreciably.

Something else that "makes the man" (and does even more for him!)

"Clothes make the man", says the old adage. And certainly a trim appearance can do much to help a man make a good impression on others.

But today more and more men are learning about another way to enhance their standing with certain people. That is, to own life insurance.

Take employers, for instance. To them, a man's ownership of life insurance suggests that he is foresighted, thrifty, realistic. Above all, it reflects willingness to accept responsibility—an attitude that impresses every employer.

In fact, anyone who learns that a man owns life insurance regards him with added respect. It represents one of the most important assets any man can have—an asset held by nearly all successful men in every walk of life.

Yet perhaps the most important effect of owning life insurance is on the policyholder himself. It gives him a sense of achievement. For in no other way can he create such a valuable estate for so little in so short a time. And this, in turn, adds to his own self-confidence.

So life insurance can do more than provide financial security for your family and yourself in later years. It also influences people in ways that help win success!
