MR. SPEAKER, I MAY BE PERMITTED TO SAY

SHOWING NOT ONLY NO DEFICIT, BUT INSTEAD OF AN ESTIMATED SURPLUS OF $2,000,000, THERE IS A SURPLUS OF $4,132,743 IN THE TREASURY!"

Reply to Rev. Dr. O'Brien.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—You say I must be short. I will try.
"It was not, nor is it now," the Dr.'s intention "to be a party to a 'Religious Controversy' in a newspaper," why did he commence it? I did not allow myself "in an unseemly exhibition," etc. I spoke quietly, and spoke the solid truth, and Dr.
O'Brien does not and cannot disprove my statements.

It would be well if the Dr. would restrict himself to subjects with which he is really conversant. He lays down the law very confidently in the matter of Celts and Teutons and Britons; but it is evident Ethnology is not his forte. The Britons were not truly Celts, but Cimbric, nor were the Normans Celts. Celtic element predominant in England, indeed! Of, say, 60,000 words, but 100 are Celtic; and, mark this: in the grammatical structure of our language not a vestige of Celtic remains. What perfect nonsense the Dr. writes!

I have Ligouri and also Dens, and from them I am prepared to prove some piety, some blasphemy, and a good deal that is disgusting. Why does the Dr. call my attention to anything so horrible? Does he think I am ignorant of Romanism? I have not Gury; but M. Bert, sometime French Minister of Public Instruction, in his "La Morale des Jesuites," charges the Jesuits, by quotations from Gury, with corrupting the youth; that Gury advances "views of lying which Ananias and Sapphira would have thought liberal." M. Bert also accuses the Jesuits, by their teaching, of undermining the authority of the civil power, and promoting communistic morality: this in 1879-80.

I am not puzzled at the expulsion of the Jesuits, but may as well point out one or two significant facts:—

1. It was from Roman Catholic countries those innocent lambs were expelled. What a commentary on Romanism!
2. Clement XI. condemned them for having sanctioned the use by their converts in China, of a combination of the Superstitions of Confucius with the ordinance of Christianity. O naughty Clement XI.
3. Clement XIV. among other things in his bull, says of the Order, "there was no want of the very gravest accusations alleged against the members * * * concerning their use and interpretation of certain maxims which the Holy See deservedly condemned as scandalous, and plainly prejudicial to good morals * * * seemed difficult if not impossible, for any true and lasting peace to be restored to the Church so long as it continued to exist." O wicked Clement XIV. to pen such things when by your infallible self you knew they were all untrue! And besides Dr. O'Brien says you persecuted holy innocence, too holy for this world. What will the Dr. write next?

Pope Leo XII. in an Encyclical dated May 3rd, 1824, to the Latin Bishops, says:
"We also, venerable brothers, in conformity with our Apostolic duty, exhort you to turn away your flocks from these poisonous pastures" (vernacular Bibles.) Pius IX. in the Papal Syllabus of errors groups Bible Societies along with Socialism, Communism and Secret Societies as pests. The Roman Church has done little in France, almost nothing in Italy, and quite nothing in Spain and Portugal for Biblical Study even for her clergy. Father Curci, in his preface to his recent (1879) translation of the Gospels and Acts, states thus, "The New Testament is, of all books, that which is least studied and read amongst us, inasmuch that the greater part of the laity, even such as are instructed and practising believers, do not so much as know that such a book exists in the world, and the majority of the clergy themselves scarcely know more of it than they are obliged to read in the Missal and Breviary."

The Report from Belgium was not that of a got up investigation, it was a true story.

Suppose all that be true the Dr. has written about the colporteurs. Is it mere "kick out from the peasant's cot" I complain of?
No! but attempted murder (persons not colporteurs) and a priest, wishing his shaven crown, did not prevent him from the bloody work. I say again that the Romans I knew, descendants of Spaniards, had never seen a Bible. There! now it is penned deliberately. They were not "blackguards" nor, so far as I know, "members of secret societies," but doctors, lawyers, and merchants. They were gentlemen of education, but, to a Protestant, seemed to lack conscience: their training, I presume. It appears Spain is not improving. At the 'inaugural' light of the season, held on Sunday, Easter Day, 1882 one matador was severely wounded, and another was knocked down by the infuriated bull, and so severely gored that he was carried off to the hospital in a dying state. And yet the Spanish ladies sat out and applauded the rest of the performance: this in a Christian country.

The Dr. can try his hand at the following: I defy him (1) to prove from Scripture surrender of intellect or conscience to the Roman Church, and further, God himself never demands it. He ask for "reasonable service;" Next, (2) to prove Romanism to be "the living body, society, church, congregation;" next, (3) to prove Romanism to be "the pillar and ground of truth." I will promise the Dr. to point out many a "stain and wrinkle." Next, (4) to prove St. Peter was Bishop of Rome.
I do not dispute this thing; but the Dr. cannot bring one atom of evidence which can stand the test of scholarly criticism.
It is not history.

If the Dr. wishes to hear any more in support of my speech, he has but to write, and you, Mr. Editor, to open your columns. As we have had two letters each, I shall say no more until after the elections, as you desire. Then the Dr. can, if so disposed, re-open the matter. I have a few things yet about Romanism in Spain, that shall make the ears of him that heareth it to tingle.

I presume, Mr. Editor, that I shall be allowed to reply to every letter on this question which the Dr. may put in your paper. All I want is fair play.
I am, dear Sir, yours truly, ALFRED OSBORNE.

Letter from Nicola Valley, British Columbia.

DEAR THEO.—I am going to fill these pages in description of two days of last week. Thursday, from Savona to Kam-loops, took a trail that I had not travelled before, and was well repaid in some of the grandest scenery I have seen yet. Toward evening after riding over mountain and through meadow with spring-grass and budding trees, I reached the R. C. Mission. The priest's home is very humble, one room serving as bed-room, study and reception room. Wall and ceiling, table, chairs, and bed, all seemed to have written over them, "Thou, therefore, my son, endure hardness." On the table lay open a book of "Meditations" from which he had risen to mix some medicine for a Klootlanun, reminding me of Longfellow's Legend of the Wayside Inn: "Hads't thou stayed I must have fled, That is what the Legend said."

I went with him to visit the Sisters' Schools a few steps away, attended wholly by half-breed girls. Found it very neat and the Sisters, accomplished and pleasing, as you find them everywhere. Though they are, in a special sense, shut out from the world, they seemed very contented and happy. The priests are members of O. M. I.
(Oblates Maria Immaculate) a society which received the Church's approbation early in the tenth century, and since then has had Missions all over the world. I was speaking with the priest about his leaving his home in France, the wrenching it must have cost. He told me that still he gets letters, and in broken English and with expressive French gesture, grasping his breast, he said: "It breaks my heart; I think sometimes I would rather not get them"; and then he explained that he was glad to get them, but he dreaded the pain they brought. There was something weird about the whole visit. It seemed like dropping suddenly from the nineteenth century, in which "plain living and high thinking are no more," into secluded monasticism.—

"The harvest of the quiet eye That sleeps and broods on its own heart," As secluded, it seemed, as one would find amid the mountains of Armenia or the deserts of Syria. I left with fresh admiration of the power of faith, and of these in particular, in their humble round of prayer and meditation and good works, and daily crucifixion of all worldly ambitions. It reminded me, too, of that wonderful organization which has left deep impress on fourteenth centuries, and with the vigor of youth has its emissaries in every land, almost as widely scattered as the Methodists.

Got to Kamloops about seven, spent the evening in visiting the villagers, and left next morning for Nicola by mountain trail. Left at Kamloops the trees in leaf and oaks in bloom, climbed upward and reached trees in bud, higher and reached snow, still higher and reached icebound lake as it might look in midwinter, until after some ten miles of climbing, reached the summit. Then sped along table-land for some four miles, with other mountain ranges, nearer and more distant, in view on every side.
About as near as one may come to "all among the little stars." About five miles down the other side and one is over the "Kamloops mountains." Then I got to Nicola, 35 miles that day 140 since Sunday.
BES.

Nicola, 6th May, 1882.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I would call the attention of the City Council to the filthy condition of that part of Water Street in the vicinity of the Railway Station. Whole families have been stagnant by the impurities arising from the stagnant water in the gutter. Sewerage is much required. In the opinion of the writer a sewer about five feet deep, passing the residence of Judge Reddian and extending to the shore would remedy the difficulty. If this work is not undertaken immediately, we may, in all likelihood, hear of much sickness in this locality, caused by the inactivity and inattention of the city authorities.

Yours,
CITIZEN.
