Soviet Architects Build Skyline

MOSCOW, July 27—(AP)—Architects here are building, for what is believed the first time in history, a symmetrical skyline for an entire city.

"It is as though an architectural symphony were being composed," said A. Mordivinov, president of the Academy of Architecture of the U. S. S. R.

The pieces of this symphony in steel and stone are the tall buildings which are going up in the Soviet capital.

The centre of it all will be a gigantic palace of the Soviets with a great statue of Lenin on top. From this, the other buildings will radiate out to the very suburbs.
